Ont. Nuclear Plant Unsafe?

8 U.S. Power Plants Ordered to Shut Down

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) has ordered eight nuclear power plants shut down until they make safety improvements needed to prevent a repetition of the Three Mile Island accident.

The NRC also said Friday it would continue to study these plants and might require additional safety changes later.

All eight plants plus the heavily-damaged Three Mile Island Unit 2 in Pennsylvania were designed by Babcock and Wilcox Co. using systems which, NRC officials said, made the facilities sensitive to malfunctions and hard to control.

With the crippling of Three Mile Island Unit 2 and the closing of its eight sister plants, 14 U.S. plants have been shut down by NRC safety orders, or one out of every five nuclear power plants in the country.

Five other plants have been shut down since March 13 for inspections to make sure they can withstand earthquakes without serious damage to their cooling systems.

The only plant in western United States affected by Friday's shut-down order is the BW-designed Rancho Seco plant in California which opened in 1974. The NRC ordered it to shut down starting today until its safety improvements are completed.

Also ordered to shut down today was one of the three Oconee units, which were opened in 1973 and 1974 at Lake Keowee, S.C.

Leaked Report Gives Details

TORONTO (CP) — Leaked documents made public Friday indicate that Ontario's Bruce generating station has been plagued with some of the same problems that last month triggered the worst nuclear power accident in United States history.

"The events outlined are only the tip of the iceberg. Suffice it to say that something must be done," an anonymous correspondent identifying himself only as "Schultz" wrote in a letter to Eddie Sargent, Liberal member of the Ontario legislature for Grey-Bruce.

Seven reports on problems at Bruce nuclear station on Lake Huron and the covering letter from Schultz were given to the Ontario legislature's select committee on Ontario Hydro affairs by Stuart Smith, leader of the Liberal opposition.

Since the accident that led to the closing of the two Three Mile Island nuclear plants near Harrisburg, Pa., in March, Ontario Hydro and energy ministry officials have vigorously defended the Canada's Candu reactors, saying Ontario nuclear plants are much safer than those in the U.S.

But Schulz said many areas of operation require further investigation, including the Bruce stack monitoring system, which he said has never operated.

The system is supposed to warn of the release of radioactive gases, but releases could occur without the operator ever knowing, the letter said.

"The release would eventually be discovered (perhaps one week later) by a chemical sampling, but the operator is defenceless in taking immediate action because of poorly-designed equipment."

Schulz said a nuclear safety review should be carried out by knowledgeable people "with no pecuniary interests in nuclear power."

He said leaked radioactive substances inside the containment building at Bruce could be safely eliminated by Candu's unique vacuum system.

But if there were a hole in the containment system — and there have been at least six at Bruce — the vacuum unit would be useless and the radioactive release would be worse than at Three Mile Island, he said.

The most serious of the seven incidents described in the reports was a deuterium gas explosion which occurred in an inactive reactor on March 14, 1978.

Deuterium is heavy hydrogen and has the same explosive qualities as ordinary hydrogen.

An Ontario Hydro report said a spark from the torch of a welder who was repairing a tube cap on a line leading to a gas tank caused the deuterium gas explosion.

Gas had been taken out of the area where the welder was working March 6, but no checks had been made on gas levels, the report said.

No one was injured in the explosion, which blew out four rupture discs.

The documents noted that following the explosion, pressure-release devices operated as designed and minor amounts of radioac-

It's a Case Of Legal Precedent

VANCOUVER (UPC) — Lawyers using the provincial courthouse library have been told they cannot use the reference room any more because too many books are missing.

A notice went up on the library door Friday, causing embarrassment to the lawyers and widespread amusement among prisoners and others waiting for court appearances.

The notice, signed by senior prosecutor Bruce Donald, said it was "regretfully necessary" to close the Crown counsel library to lawyers and articled students because of the high number of missing books.

"We don't know exactly how many books are missing, but enough have vanished to make it a real problem," a library spokesman said. "We don't know if they have been stolen or just not returned."

2 Tankers Collide, One Sinks

BREST, France (AP) — A tanker carrying more than 12 million gallons of crude oil sank off the Brittany coast today after colliding with another tanker in the area where the supertanker Amoco Cadiz was wrecked last year.

The ship's hull was gashed and an oil slick was reported, but French officials said a strong wind was pushing it away from land. They said they were not expecting the "black tide" that came from the Amoco Cadiz after it ran aground last May 16 and dumped its 67 million gallons of crude.

The sinking of the 28,695-ton, Liberian-registered tanker Gino appeared certain to hamper efforts to prevent its load of crude from pouring out of its gashed hull into the sea.

All 33 members of its crew were safely rescued by the Soviet ship Veliky Oktiabr, Brest maritime officials said in a communique.

The other ship, the 18,000-ton, Norwegian-registered tanker Team Coaster, carried no cargo but 29,000 gallons of its fuel spilled into the Atlantic. It also suffered damage to its bow but was still able to navigate. There were no reports of injuries to its crew.

An oil slick estimated two kilometres long and 180 metres wide surfaced 200 km off the French coast immediately after the collision, officials said.

Maritime officials said the slick was far enough off the coast not to present an immediate danger to the waters and beaches of Brittany.

The sea was reported calm but fog was hampering efforts to determine the full extent of the oil spill, port officials said.

"We are preparing for any eventuality but we hope we will not have to use our full contigency plan," said Environmental Minister Michel d'Ornano.

Maverick and Comet 'Worse Than Pinto'

WASHINGTON (WP) — The U.S. Transportation Department Friday asked the Ford Motor Co. to recall nearly 1 million 1970-73 Ford Mavericks and 1971-73 Mercury Comets to correct a "safety-related defect" that causes a large percentage of the cars to catch fire after rear-end collisions.

Citing new data that indicate the Mavericks and Comets may be more prone to rear-end collision fires than even the Ford Pinto, DOT's National Highway Traffic Safety Administration wrote Ford president Philip Caldwell Friday to warn of the findings.

The letter to Caldwell cites DOT's "initial determination" of a safety defect, and invites Ford to respond at a public meeting May 29. Unless Ford can prove NHTSA"s studies to be incorrect, such a defect finding carries with it a requirement to recall.

NHTSA said it has received reports of at least 26 rear-impact crashes involving Mavericks and Comets resulting in fuel spillage and fire, and causing at least 31 fatalities and 19 injuries.

NHTSA said it had conducted an engineering analysis of the problem, and found that in two of five test crashes fires started because of fuel leakage.

Mother Smothers Baby To Avoid Arab Terrorists

JERUSALEM (AP) — An Israeli mother Friday described how she smothered her baby girl to stop her cries as Arab terrorists killed her husband and other daughter.

Israel television showed the interview with Semadar Haran, who five days earlier survived 90 minutes of horror by hiding with her two-year-old daughter, Yael, while the raiders seized her husband, Dani, and five-year-old Eynat.

Mrs. Haran, dry-eyed but speaking in bursts of emotion, said her entire family fled to the utility room of their apartment with a neighbor, Germane Sasson, when they knew the raiders were nearby.

The baby could not be calmed, she said, and the father and Eynat left to get a pacifier.

"Suddenly there was shooting that shook the building to its foundations. Yael screamed," Mrs. Haran said. She said she could hear the terrorists looking for the source of the cries. Mrs. Haran continued:

"I grabbed Yael and covered her mouth. I knew as soon as they discovered us they would throw a grenade inside.

"I had the feeling that she could die from this. But I made a quick calculation. I said: 'She is going to die anyway if they throw a grenade. We will all die, and so will she. There is a chance I can keep her quiet — maybe she will lose consciousness.'

"I held my hand on her mouth until I had no strength left. I felt she wanted to breath, but I had no choice. I had to keep her quiet because the footsteps below — they were walking, searching."

She could feel the life draining from her daughter, yet she held on. "At that moment, I felt as if I were going through the holocaust. I am hiding upstairs with the child in my arms — in fact strangling her — and another woman. We are all alone. There is no one to care for us."

Mrs. Haran, believing Yael might be dead, heard her husband pleading, "Don't shoot, don't shoot."

"I turned to Germane and said: 'I think now I am left alone.' I knew that with these murderous terrorists there is no chance Dani and Eynat will return."

She said that during the ordeal she thought of the Nazi holocaust which her mother survived. "I didn't see any difference between then, when people were led like sheep to the slaughter, and that day when I felt I was going to my own slaughter."

Four terrorists entered the building Sunday after wading ashore from a raft. Two raiders were killed and the other two captured.

Hydro 'Meddling' in Study

REVELSTOKE (CP) — The man hired to study the social and economic impact of B.C. Hydro's Revelstoke dam project has resigned after charging that Hydro interfered with the program.

Nick Vincent, who was hired in 1977 as impact monitor for the $1.5-billion project, says Hydro now has taken control of the program which was originally designed to be totally independent of the Crown corporation.

"In the end there was no way that the program was serving the public as it was supposed to," he said in an interview earlier this week. "I could not go to the public any more and say that what I was telling them was lily white."

Vincent said project manager Ralph Spinney was the person who interfered most with his efforts to remain independent.

Spinney, however, said Thursday he did not intend to be obstructive but felt Vincent's reports contained "too many words and not enough information."

He said he wanted statistics in the reports while Vincent wanted to make qualitative judgments.

Vincent, 35, officially resigned Wednesday. His $22,400 salary was paid by Hydro through the Columbia-Shuswap regional district.

"I made sure before I took the job that Hydro could not interfere with me, that I was independent. I quit when the program was emasculated, when the rug was pulled out from underneath the credibility."

Vincent said one of his main problems was Spinney, who believed that the dam near this southeastern B.C. city "should be built without any interference from anyone and he made it clear in a hundred different ways."

He said Spinney viewed the program as a "potential hindrance" which should stick to statistics and not make qualitative judgments about the impact of the dam on area residents.

Vincent charged that:

—His reports were delayed, some as long as three months, or obscured before being made public;

—Hydro personnel obtained copies of the reports before they were presented to the regional board, contrary to the original agreement.

—He was told not to attend future meetings of a technical committee.

He said that in March a special committee of regional district and Hydro representatives was set up to review Vincent's reports.

"It meant that my reports would go to Hydro in the draft stage before they went to the regional board," he said. "It was the last straw and I quit."

It won't be until the last Sunday in October that everyone can fall back and recover the lost hour of sleep by stopping their clocks for an hour.

French-Soviet Detente Vow

MOSCOW (CP) — The Soviet Union and France today signed a detente pledge and a long-term economic, industrial and technological co-operation agreement at the end of French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing's three-day visit

Giscard d'Estaing and Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev appeared to have failed to narrow their differences on disarmament despite a longer-than-expected session of talks Friday.

French and Soviet spokesmen said the two-hour exchange of views clarified some nuances but left positions of both sides unchanged.

U.S. Swaps Spies For Dissidents

WASHINGTON (UPI) — After months of "painfully laborious" secret talks, U.S. President Jimmy Carter pardoned two Russian spies in exchange for the freedom of five jailed Soviet dissidents, including Alexander Ginzburg.

All of the freed dissidents are now in New York City. They arrived Friday aboard a commercial Soviet airliner and the convicted spies returned to Moscow on the same aircraft.

Those released from Soviet jails were Ginzburg, a leader of the tiny Russian dissident movement, Mark Dymshyts, Eduard Kuznetsov, Valentin Moroz and Georgi Vins.

The Russian spies, Valdik Enger and Rudolf Chernyayev, were convicted last October of trying to steal U.S. naval secrets and sentenced to 50 years in prison.

A high-level U.S. official, who asked not to be identified, said "the release is the result of painfully laborious negotiations."

While only conceding that the exchange "certainly . . . creates a better atmosphere in the relationship" with the Kremlin, the development obviously was intended to coincide with the need for Senate approval of a strategic arms pact.

A SALT II accord is expected to be announced shortly, perhaps as early as next week.

The two spies, who had been working on the U.N. staff as international civil servants, were arrested in New Jersey in May, 1978, and accused of trying to buy anti-submarine warfare secrets from a U.S. naval officer.

Ginzburg, 43, is by far the most prominent of the Russian activists who were released.

An associate of exiled Nobel Prize novelist Alexander Solzhenitsyn, he managed a special fund set by Solzhenitsyn to aid families of political prisoners and led a group trying to monitor Soviet compliance with international human rights agreements.

In Moscow, meanwhile, dissident leader Andrei Sakharov, 58, was told today to remain in bed following a brain spasm that briefly cut the flow of blood to his brain, his wife said.

City Man Charged With Murder Try

A 44-year-old city man has been charged with attempted murder following a wrench-wielding attack on two women during what police have described as a domestic dispute at a house in Saanich early today.

Kenneth Lucas Carter, 206-1575 Begbie, appeared in provincial court this morning and was remanded in custody to Monday for election of trial method and plea. He has also been charged with assault causing bodily harm and possession of an offensive weapon.

A Saanich police spokesman said Carter's estranged wife, Maureen Bennett Carter, 39, and June Erla Burns, 43, of 4260 Glanford were taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital following the attack.

Mrs. Carter was treated for head injuries and multiple fractures to her left index finger, wrist and left arm. Mrs. Burns was treated for bruises to her head and shoulder. Both were released a few hours later.

The police spokesman said a man entered the Burns residence, where Mrs. Carter had been staying, at about 1 a.m. After a short conversation he pulled out a 15-inch-long wrench and attacked Mrs. Carter.

Postal Keys Stolen

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Three keys stolen from a Kitchener post office depot earlier this week will open every apartment lobby mail-box and street corner mail-drop box in Canada, postal officials said today.

Police said someone entered the depot through an air conditioning vent on the roof. About $175 in cash and a letter carrier's hat and bag also were stolen.

Break-In Charged

Two 18-year-olds have been charged with breaking and entering after they were found inside Durrance Road elementary school, 6021 West Saanich Road, Friday night.

A security patrol officer spotted the pair while making his rounds at about 9 p.m. and held them until police arrived.

The two were released from custody and issued appearance notices to appear in provincial court next month.

Immigrant To Leave After Bomb

TORONTO (CP) — A midtown camera store was destroyed by a bomb and moments later the owner said he was returning to Yugoslavia to escape his political enemies.

Albin Gabrovec said he believes the bomb was set by members of a fanatical Croation nationalist group.

The bomb shattered two plate glass windows and destroyed much of the stock in the store. Gabrovec said he and three customers were unhurt.

Personalized Plates in B.C.

British Columbia will introduce personalized automobile licence plates this year, Transportation Minister Alex Fraser said Friday.

He said the move is being taken because of public demand.

"We've had simply hundreds of requests for such a service so we will be taking applications for the plates as of July 1."

He said some of the most popular requests so far have been for plates bearing the words Big Mac, Smokey, Help and Mayday.

The new plates, issued on a first-come-first-served basis, will cost $75 for five years. This will be additional to the average $22 annual licence-plate fee most motorists pay.

Fraser said reqested slogans can be any combination of between two and six characters, consisting of numbers or letters, or both. Political slogans and obscenities will not be allowed.

Many Defy Flood Warning

Times News Services

WINNIPEG — Many Red River Valley residents are vowing to defy nature and cling to their land, despite government warnings to evacuate.

However, Transporation Minister Harry Enns, who is the minister responsible for the Emergency Measures Organization, said cabinet may pass an order-in-council this weekend to permit forced removals.

Enns said the action will be taken if people endanger themselves by trying to "sit out the flood."

"We'll stay until it's over," said Cary Atienza, of Emerson where river levels Friday reached those of the disastrous 1950 flood which inundated the then unprotected town.

"If I had to leave I would feel very heartbroken," said Emerson mayor Ralph Eis-Brenner. He said he feels like a captain who wants to go down with his ship.

Flood officials estimated late Friday that 4,600 people have heeded government advice and evacuated their homes on farms and in ring-diked communities along the flooding river.

But there are between 10,000 and 12,000 residents in the flood area from the American border to Winnipeg. The number who have acually evacuated cannot be accurately told.

A number of people have refused to leave Morris, another of the larger towns on the Red, although less than one-sixth of the town of 1,600 remained Friday.

"We may have to leave yet, I don't know, but I have all the faith in the world that we won't even get our feet wet," said Mrs. Terry Holly of Morris.

Said Bill Enns, the manager of Morris Valley Hatchery:

"I'm positive it (the ring dike) will hold. I don't feel threatened at all.

There is no such security for farmers living in already-flooded areas outside the dikes.

"Lord, they're barging out all the cattle they can right now, hoping for enough time to get them all," said Morris Mayor Jack Murray.

Emerson will be the first Manitoba community to feel the river's flood crest arriving from the United States. The crest, expected to exceed that of 1950, will move slowly north to other diked communities and reach floodway-protected Winnipeg by May 5 or 6.

Most of those living along the route have expressed confidence the ring dikes, built to heights exceeding the levels of 1950, will save their towns and villages.

Meanwhile in Ontario, more than half of the 500 residents of the Northern Ontario town of Field have been forced from their homes by the flooding Sturgeon River.

About 80 soldiers from the Canadian Armed Forces base in North Bay arrived in Field on Friday to reinforce homes in the town with sandbags.

In Saskatchewan, residents along the swollen Souris River in southern Saskatchewan soon may be able to relax a little, although flood danger has not passed completely.

Queen Keeps Cool in Crash

A car carrying three gypsy scrap dealers struck a chauffeur-driven limousine in which Queen Elizabeth was riding, but no one was injured, police at Datchet in Berkshire County reported Friday. The offside rear door of the royal Rover was badly buckled in the collision, police said. Witness Antony Sale, who has a shop near the scene of the collision said: "The Queen must have nerves of steel." He said she showed no emotion as she stepped out of the car carrying one of her pet corgi dogs and continued on her way in an escorting police car. The Queen was bound for Windsor Castle. One of the gypsies, John Loveridge, said a detective told him not to worry about the accident and to send the bill for any damage to Buckingham Palace. He said the police told him: "The Queen sends her regards and hopes that you are all right."

Indicted by a federal grand jury in San Francisco on charges of conspiring to obstruct justice, reputed Mafia chieftain Joseph Bonanno Sr. surrendered Friday to the FBI in Tucson, Ariz. Bonanno, 74, was released on a $25,000 personal recognizance bond set by a San Francisco federal judge. The indictment charged Bonanno and Jack DiFilippi, the 54-year-old nephew of Bonanno's wife, with conspiring to prevent the grand jury from learning facts about businesses run by Bonanno's two sons.

Lillian Carter says that seeing her son Billy sober is "the greatest thing that's happened to me in a long time. It's the first time I've seen him sober in 10 years." En route to be honored at a banquet in Ponca City, Okla., the president's mother spent a few minutes at the Atlanta, Ga., airport so she could meet her son, who had just returned home from an alcoholic treatment program at a Long Beach, Calif., naval medical centre.

Toronto hotel detectives outside a room where Prime Minister Trudeau was speaking gave the bum's rush Friday to Kellie Everts, who calls herself "the girl who strips for God." Everts was distributing pamphlets with a partially-topless picture of herself to all who would take one. The pamphlet said "Kelly says God wants Trudeau in the government." As Trudeau opened his speech to businessmen he joked "I understand there's a certain person in the lobby that I would like to see." Meanwhile, Conservative Leader Joe Clark's wife, Maureen McTeer says she hasn't read Margaret Trudeau's book Beyond Reason but may if she has time after the election.

Provincial Judge Ian Dubienski in Winnipeg has ordered former Manitoba highways minister Joe Borowski, 45, to work 50 hours for a city nursing home without pay as sentence for assaulting a Revenue Canada collections officer last November. The judge also instructed him not to talk to the news media for one year about his conviction. Borowski has refused to pay income tax since the federal government liberalized abortion laws.

Hollywood producers Richard D. Zanuck and David Brown are leaving Universal Pictures to return to 20th Century-Fox Pictures next year, 20th Century-Fox has reported. During the seven years they were with Universal, Zanuck and Brown produced such films as Jaws, Jaws 2 and The Sting.

Premier Rene Levesque and his wife Corinne, looking well-rested and in high spirits, returned Friday from their two-week honeymoon in France. Greeted at Mirabel Airport the newlyweds appeared bemused when a reporter ventured to ask Mrs. Levesque whether she was pregnant. "Who me?" Mrs. Levesque replied with a giggle, as her husband grinned.

Astles Believed Awaiting Uganda Trial

Times News Services

NAIROBI, Kenya — British-born Robert Astles, who became ousted Ugandan dictator Idi Amin's right-hand man, was flown to Uganda today, eyewitnesses reported.

He is expected to face trial for his role in Amin's bloody eight-year rein of terror. Astles was reported to have helped set up the State Research Bureau, Amin's terror brigade, which is said to have killed as many as 300,000 Ugandans.

Sources said Astles could be charged with murder and financial crimes.

Witnesses who are personally acquainted with Astles said they saw him taken off a Uganda Airlines plane at Entebbe Airport, 33 kilometres south of Kampala, the capital.

Informed sources in Nairobi said Kenya extradited Astles in response to a request Thursday from Uganda's new justice minister, Dan Nabudere.

Astles, aged about 55, was reported to have fled to Kenya earlier this month as Tanzanian and Ugandan-exile forces took Kampala and toppled the Amin government.

He also is reported to be the highest-ranking member of Amin's regime to fall into the hands of the new government of provisional President Yusufu Lule. Reports that Vice-President Gen. Mustafa Adrisi was captured in a Kampala hospital have not been confirmed.

Meanwhile, the new Ugandan government announced Friday that Britain is donating $2 million in emergency relief assistance in the first contribution by a major western power to this East African state's reconstruction since the overthrow of Amin.

Britain broke off relations and aid to the Amin regime following the murder in July, 1976 of a British-born Israeli citizen, Mrs. Dora Bloch, after the Israeli raid that freed passengers held hostage aboard a French airliner at Entebbe airport.

Tories Slip More

LONDON (AP) — The Conservative party's lead over the governing Labor party has been slashed to a mere three percentage points in the latest opinion poll published today.

The Market Opinion and Research International (MORI) poll, taken for the newspaper Daily Express, shows 44 per cent of those surveyed planned to vote for Margaret Thatcher's Conservatives, 41 per cent for Prime Minister James Callaghan's Labor party, 12 per cent for the Liberals and three per cent for other factions. At the start of the campaign April 2, MORI pollsters put the Tories 13 points ahead.

Managing B.C. Hydro

B.C. Hydro has long been one of the best whipping boys in the province. It has been blamed for inefficiency, for insensitivity, for bad forecasting, for lack of awareness of environmental issues, for a reckless disregard of many of the needs and desires of B.C. citizens.

When a government-dominated legislative committee issues a report condemning the Crown corporation during the middle of an election campaign, however, it's obvious Hydro is really in trouble.

The report, issued this week by the legislative committee on Crown corporations, examined the performance of Hydro during the building of dams on the Columbia River, mostly during the 1960s and early 1970s. Its conclusions could scarcely have been more damning:

"Construction projects now being undertaken by Hydro . . . must be carried out in a very different manner than that which the committee observed during the inquiry.

"The potential consequences of Hydro implementing currently conceived projects in the same manner as those which were the subject of this inquiry is of utmost concern as it carries with it the risk of debasing the financial credibility of the province. . . .

"It should be clearly understood that the committee's overriding concern is to ensure that unsatisfactory management practices disclosed by this inquiry are not continued."

And so on. And so forth.

The committee found evidence of grossly inadequate planning before projects were put out to tender, of ineffective financial control, of avoidance of the requirements set down by legislation, of inappropriate decision-making practices.

One result of this was significant cost overruns in the building of the three dams and the powerhouse at Mica Creek. As the report notes, "it is all too obvious that if inadequate financial planning and control were to exist today, in consideration of the enormous scale of Hydro projects and their related costs (e.g. Revelstoke dam) estimated at twice the cost of Mica), the consequences for both Hydro and the province could be severe."

The criticisms of the way Hydro operated a decade ago are disturbing enough. They show quite clearly that a significant proportion of our electricity bills is going to pay for the mistakes of a weak organization.

Even more disturbing, however, is the reaction of current B.C. Hydro chairman Robert Bonner to the report. It might be expected that Bonner would be eager to tell the public that these weaknesses had been cleared up since he took over the Hydro chairmanship, to explain what changes had been made.

Not a bit of it.

Instead, Bonner (whom, it should be remembered, was a senior cabinet minister in the government of W.A.C. Bennett during most of the time the dams were being built) was sharply critical of the report and strongly defended Hydro's record.

"Frankly, I think the report should have praised the management and the work force on the Columbia projects," he said. "I think the report is lacking in its failure to point out that the Columbia dams were engineering triumphs."

He said he believes that Hydro is a remarkably efficient corporation, and added that one reason for the high costs was that safety was put ahead of pure cost considerations. "You don't send a man to the moon on the basis of the lowest tender," he said.

To put it in its most charitable light, Bonner has missed the point of the report. The legislative committee is not criticizing the engineering of the dams which may indeed be engineering marvels; it is saying that safety and engineering standards could have been maintained at a lower cost, had Hydro's management watched the incoming bills more carefully.

Unless the chairman of Hydro understands that concept, it seems unlikely that management of the Revelstoke dam or any other Hydro project of the future will be any better. The chairman's apparent attitude to costs — that they don't matter much as long as engineering and safety standards are good — will hardly encourage strict respect for financial matters in the rest of the corporation.

The political masters of B.C. Hydro — the provincial cabinet — should explain to Bonner immediately that they expect new Hydro projects to be better managed than those studied by the legislative committee. If those expectations are not fulfilled quickly, they may have no choice but to put someone with a better understanding of the situation in charge of Hydro.

MARCEL PEPIN

Election's hidden agenda

The whole relationship of Quebec to the rest of Canada is the simmering issue in this electoral campaign. At least Liberals say so.

The problem, posed by a drifting economy is far wider and much deeper than national unity, the Conservatives seem to imply.

There is no quarrel about national unity among federal parties, echoes the NDP's Ed Broadbent, because all three of them believe in a strong and united Canada. The real issue is rather good management of the economy for the benefit of the people instead of big business, claim the NDP.

On election night, Canadians will know who will form the next government, but they will never know for sure which issue was the most important. But the least informed among the voters already know that both problems will need solutions at the same time.

Both need answers

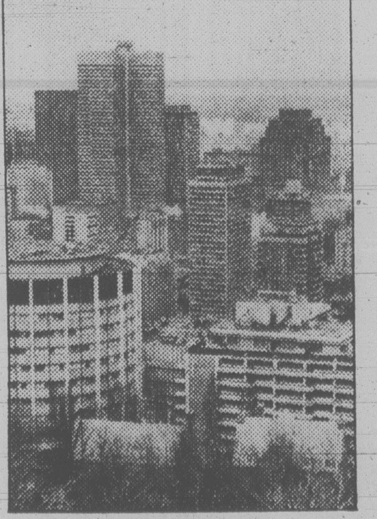
In the meantime, most of the problems a modern and rich society faces are not dealt with; they are superbly ignored by politicians who gamble on people's fears rather than on their willingness to move the country forward.

For instance, where do the parties stand on native rights? Indians and Inuit are at home in Canada. However, everybody knows they have been discriminated against and treated as an inferior people. Old treaties have often not been honored. The time has come to establish among Canadians a consensus on the better way to grant the native peoples the rightful place they deserve. Is there a better time to do so than during an election campaign? As yet, nobody dares to talk about that, even if it is the kind of issue on which French- and English-Canadians could easily unite.

What about freedom of individuals? This also is a permanent issue, because freedom is never safe. Horror stories are daily heard at the McDonald commission about the strange behavior of the police or the lack of decency of the government. A gentleman in Montreal faces the court behind closed doors. He is not even allowed to talk openly about the proceedings and nobody complains. Income tax returns, allegedly confidential, are available to the police.

Who knows for sure if they are not available also to either the politicians or the bureaucrats? What kind of use the government can make of all the information it collects on individuals through the widespread use of social insurance numbers? These are legitimate questions that should be debated during an electoral campaign.

The same can be said of the ever-increasing influence of foreign capital and multinational firms on Canadian life. For instance, they are in part responsible for the bad relationship between anglophones and francophones in a city like Montreal. Quite often, French-Canadians blame the anglophone community for unfair practices while English-speaking Canadians have nothing to do with them. Multinationals have their own rules, and basically have no loyalty except to profits. There is an obvious need to control, or at least discipline, the influence of those firms ruled by invisible shareholders. When did Trudeau or Clark frankly face that question?



MONTREAL
. . . racial misunderstandings

Foreign policy is another neglected issue. In the early 1970s, Canada tried to find new commercial partners, to increase its trade with Asian countries as well as European countries and to attract investments from parts of the world other than the U.S. It seemed to work for a while, but in recent years one can hardly notice a difference between the foreign policy of Canada and that of its powerful neighbor.

When told to do so, we spent billions to buy modern and sophisticated military equipment for the armed forces. Despite a certain reluctance, Canada yielded to U.S. pressures on energy matters and may be prepared to accept some form of a continental energy policy. This may be the right course to follow, but at least it deserves a public debate.

Nuclear policy is another matter that does not surface during this campaign, even if plenty of question marks still haunt a lot of citizens.

National unity is obviously a very important question. There may be, however, some other way to build that most wanted unity than calling for a stronger federal government. If a consensus is developed among Canadians coming from all parts of the country on such matters as native rights or foreign aid, this could give French- and English-Canadians a common goal to achieve together.

Our forgetful stars

The management of the economy is of course also very important. But freedom of the individual is paramount in a society proud of civil liberties. This campaign can do a lot to unite citizens of all provinces, providing the talk about dollars and cents is less theoretical than oriented towards an improvement of the daily life of the average Canadian.

Up to now, this campaign does not indicate any willingness on the part of the major parties to solicit from Canadians a fresh mandate to improve the quality of life. Instead, the name of the game is more power for an already too powerful government, or more privacy to the already very secret world of private business.

There is nothing in that to get very excited about.

Even if the relationship between anglophones and francophones remains the main challenge, political parties must face the fact that economic growth is more difficult to achieve today than a few decades ago. One can assume that those problems will still be around for a good while. In the meantime the kind of just society we were told about some 10 years ago still has to be built. Have the stars of the political sky forgotten about it?

EDITOR'S NOTEBOOK

Big business views the provincial election

The man is from Big Business. From the multinational corporations that have been labelled "corporate welfare bums" by the NDP. From the integrated resource industries that, like it or not, contribute a high proportion of both jobs and investment to the B.C. economy.

When he talks about what will happen if the NDP is elected on May 10, he does not sound as if he is speculating. He talks as if he knows. And what he knows is that an NDP government will mean an abrupt, massive outflow of Big Business's capital from B.C. to other parts of Canada, and even other parts of the world.

"It's not that everything will just stop," he says. "There are a lot of projects that are on line now" that will keep on going. But he predicts that exploration for oil and natural gas will slow down, that new investment in the forest and mining industries will be reduced, that companies will pause to survey the situation before putting their next projects into operation.

It is, he says, not so much what the NDP has done as what it might do. "A lot of it is a psychological thing . . . there's a lot of fear generated by the thought of the NDP running things again."

What exactly is Big Business afraid the NDP would do?

That depends on the industry. For many industries it is a fear of higher royalties and higher taxes, a fear that the NDP's policies to ensure "the people" receive a fair share of resource revenue would lead to a substantial reduction in profits for the companies involved.

The mining industry is one that especially fears the reimposition of royalties because it found the royalties under the previous NDP government so distasteful. Even though NDP leader Dave Barrett has promised a different royalty system this time around, one negotiated with the companies based on their individual needs, the mining industry believes any NDP system would make their business uneconomic.

The mining industry has so far also been the most blatant in threatening pullouts if the NDP is re-elected. The president of Teck Corporation has said publicly his company will probably not go ahead with a $150 million new mine near Ashcroft if it has to build it under an NDP administration.

The coal industry and the forest industry are others that fear higher taxes and royalties. Indeed Barrett has already stated he would raise the royalty on coal by one dollar a ton if he were elected. The forest industry is also concerned about the NDP's stand on the renewal of tree farm licences and about possible stringent environmental controls that might cost the industry millions of dollars.

For the natural gas industry, the fear is somewhat different, says the man from Big Business. The concern of petroleum companies is that the NDP would effectively prohibit the exporting of natural gas from B.C., even natural gas that has been declared "surplus" by the National Energy Board.

They apparently have an unwritten agreement with the Socreds that they will be allowed to export their surplus gas, but NDPers have said many times that all B.C.'s gas should be saved for future domestic needs, not exported for short term monetary gain.

The man warns that such a stand would definitely mean a sharp reduction in exploration and drilling for gas in B.C. Since current wells and discoveries are large enough to meet B.C.'s domestic needs for years to come, he says, there's just no point in companies continuing to explore for more if they won't be allowed to export it.

However, the man says, these specific fears of industries are not at the root of business's unwillingness to invest under an NDP government. "It's more pervasive than that," he says. "It's a deeper thing, a fear that under the NDP the whole economy will go to rack and ruin again." It's a fear composed of unconnected fragments — huge wage settlements, more labor strife, and an odd self-fulfilling prophecy of companies following each other out of the province based on the assumption that if their rivals know things are bad enough to leave, they must know something.

The man wants to make clear that Big Business isn't enthralled with the thought of another Social Credit government either. "The perception is that Bill Bennett doesn't like big business. He really only likes small business . . . the thing with Macmillan Bloedel and CPI showed that."

However, he says, it's business's view that it really doesn't have any choice. "None of us could ever vote for the NDP; what else is there in B.C. any more except Bill Bennett?"—B.McL.

Gov't commended

I am writing at this time to commend the present provincial government for its efforts in improving the financial management of British Columbia over these past three years.

The public should remember that as the NDP leaders continue to emphasize that the Social Credit government is unqualified, such critics need only look again at themselves and be honest with themselves. The NDP has criticized the Social Credit government for its increase and then reduction of sales taxes. A good look at the NDP financial mismanagement reveals that when the Social Credit government took office the books of the province were in pitiful condition. The NDP emphasized more government control and exemplified its great proposals with quick spending and loose handling of our tax money. Speaking of taxes, it's interesting to see how the provincial gasoline taxes were increased when the NDP introduced the ICBC. Sure, the NDP likes to give everybody a run for their money . . . they do it by taking it away! Let's not give them another chance to do it!

People complain about the ferry rates and how they were increased — you have to look at reality. Ferry rates hadn't fluctuated for many years and like all public transportation, the costs of fuel, labor, and upkeep continue to escalate. Even with present ferry rates, the province continues to suffer losses on the Gulf Islands runs and barely breaks even on the Swartz Bay-Tsawwassen run.

In order to prevent poor mismanagement of finances, the Social Credit government has enlisted the aid of an auditor-general which will help the government improve its internal and external expenditures.

We have all seen how important it is to keep our own books in balance. If you extend this to a provincial scale, remember, you can't continue spending and enlarging your debt forever — only if you want to lose your credit. Let's keep our credit in good condition and stick to good government, the Social Credit government. — Alan Herrington, 569 Baxter Ave.

Barrett or Bennett

As a disillusioned NDPer from Saskatchewan, on arrival in B.C. I immediately purchased a membership in David Anderson's Liberal party, worked hard in the election which returned the NDP for the first time in the province, with the Liberal strength unchanged from five and two Conservatives.

Liberals McGeer, Williams, Gardom and Conservative Hugh Curtis decided to emulate the citizens of ancient Rome where "none were for the party, but all were for the state."

Rivalry between the free enterprise parties is a very minor matter compared to their combined opposition to socialism.

Those of you who feel allegiance to the provincial Liberal or Conservative parties must be big enough to understand that the decline of your party's representation in the legislature is a cumulative situation, leading more and more people to realize that your parties cannot possibly command sufficient strength to form either government or a viable opposition.

You must be big enough to acknowledge that in politics it is philosophy which is at stake and not the party label. You must be big enough to realize that all your misguided provincial leaders can say on the hustings will in essence by supportive of the NDP.

As one who has travelled the same road, can I implore you to face up to the facts that in this provincial election you have only two options, Barrett or Bennett?

Follow the precept of your previous enlightened leaders "If you cannot lick 'em, join 'em", facing you as you mark your ballot is the question "Join Who?"

As a disillusioned NDPer, an alarmed Liberal and a very concerned Conservative I must emphasize a vote for any but Social Credit is a vote for Barrett. — Ken Burns, 401-640 Dallas Road.

Thanks from Lions

Some weeks have passed since the fifth annual Timmy's Springtime Telethon and in case you have not heard of the financial results, we are most delighted to advise that $108,000 was raised during the 21 hours of continuous broadcasting.

A good percentage of this money was raised through promotions put on by secondary schools, businesses, service organizations etc., prior to the Telethon.

There is no doubt in our minds that the success of pre-promotion events could not have been accomplished without the excellent coverage that was provided by the two daily papers.

On a more recent note we should also express our appreciation for the excellent publicity given to the Scott Schooner swim, prior to and following the actual event on April 21. I am not sure if you know that Mr. Schooner made a pledge that any money that might be raised from the swim was to be credited to the Victoria Telethon. Here, too, we are pleased to advise that the total was approximately $3,000.

On behalf of the board, myself, and the handicapped people we serve, we express our heartfelt thanks. — Jack Tang, Telethon General Chairman, B.C. Lions Society for Crippled Children.

King's English and art of conversation

By HENRY FAIRLIE

The Washington Post

Conversation is the most sociable of all human activities. And it is an activity only of humans. However intricate the ways in which animals communicate with each other, they do not indulge in anything that deserves the name of conversation.

The charm of conversation is that it does not really start from anywhere, and no one has any idea where it will go as it meanders or leaps and sparkles or just glows. The enemy of good conversation is the person who has "something to say." Conversation is not for making a point. Argument may often be a part of it, but the purpose of the argument is not to convince. There is no winning in conversation.

In fact, the best conversationalists are those who are prepared to lose. Suddenly they see the moment for one of their best anecdotes, but in a flash the conversation has moved on and the opportunity is lost. They are ready to let it go.

Pub talk is best

Perhaps it is because of my upbringing in English pubs that I think bar conversation has a charm of its own. Bar friends are not deeply involved in each others' lives. They are companions, not intimates. The fact that their marriages may be on the rocks, or that their love affairs have been broken, or even that they got out of bed on the wrong side, is simply not a concern. They are like the musketeers of Dumas who, although they lived side by side with each other, did not delve into each other's lives or the recesses of their thoughts and feelings.

It was on such an occasion the other evening, as the conversation moved desultorily here and there, from the most commonplace to thoughts of Jupiter, without any focus and with no need for one, that suddenly the alchemy of conversation took place, and all at once there was a focus.

I do not remember what made one of our companions say it — she clearly had not come into the bar to say it, it was not something that was pressing on her mind — but her remark fell quite naturally into the talk. "Someone told me the other day that the phrase, 'the King's English,' was a term of criticism, that it means language which one should not properly use."

The glow of the conversation burst into flames. There were affirmations and protests and denials, and of course the promise, made in all such conversation, that we would look it up in the morning. That would settle it; but conversation does not need to be settled; it could still go ignorantly on.

It was an Australian who had given her such a definition of "the King's English," which produced some rather tart remarks about what one could expect from the descendants of convicts. We had travelled in five minutes to Australia. Of course, there would be resistance to the King's English in such a society. There is always resistance in the lower classes to any attempt by an upper class to lay down rules for "English as it should be spoken." Look at the language barrier between the Saxon churls and their Norman conquerors.

The conversation had swung from the Australian convicts of the 19th century to the English peasants of the 12th century. Who was right, who was wrong, did not matter. The conversation was on wings.

Someone took one of the best-known examples, which is still always worth the reconsidering. When we talk of meat on our tables we use French words; when speak of the animals from which the meat comes we use Anglo-Saxon words. It is a pig in its sty; it is pork (porc) on the table. There are cattle in the fields, but we sit down to beef (boeuf). Chickens become poultry (poulet), and a calf becomes veal (veau). Even if our menus were not written in French out of snobbery, the English we used in them would still be Norman English. What all of this tells us is of a deep class rift in the culture of England after the Norman Conquest.

The Saxon peasants who tilled the land, and reared the animals, could not afford the meat, which went to Norman tables. The peasants were allowed to eat the rabbits that scampered over their fields, and since that meat was cheap, the Norman lords of course turned up their noses at it. So rabbit is still rabbit on our tables, and not changed into some rendering of lapin.

As we listen today to the arguments about bilingual education, we ought to think ourselves back into the shoes of the Saxon peasant. The new ruling class had built a cultural barrier against him by building their French against his own language. There must have been a great deal of cultural humiliation felt by the English when they revolted under Saxon leaders like Hereward the Wake. "The King's English" — if the term had existed then — had become French. And here in North America now, 900 years later, we are still the heirs to it.

Once in Shakespeare

So the next morning, the conversation over, one looked it up. The phrase came into use sometime in the 16th century. "Queen's English" is found in Nash's "Strange Newes of the Intercepting Certaine Letters" in 1593, and in 1602, Dekker wrote of someone, "thou clipst the Kinge's English."

Is the phrase in Shakespeare? That would be the confirmation that it was in general use. He uses it once, when Mistress Quickly in "The Merry Wives of Windsor" says of her master coming home in a rage, ". . . here will be an old abusing of God's patience and the King's English," and it rings true.

One could have expected that it would be about then that the phrase would be coined. After five centuries of growth, of tussling with the French of the Normans and the Angevins and the Plantagenets, and at last absorbing it, the conquered in the end conquering the conqueror, English had come royally into its own.

There was a King's (or Queen's) English to be proud of. The Elizabethans blew on it as a dandelion clock, and its seeds multiplied and floated to the ends of the earth. "The King's English" was no longer a form of what would now be regarded as racial discrimination.

Yet there had been something in the remark of the Australian. The phrase has always been used a little pejoratively and even facetiously by the lower classes. One feels that even Mistress Quickly — a servant — is saying that Dr. Caius — her master — will lose his control and speak with the vigor of ordinary folk. If the King's English is "English as it should be spoken," the claim is often mocked by the underlings, when they say with a jeer, "English as it should be spoke." The rebellion against a cultural dominance is still there.

There is always a great danger, as Carlyle put it, that "words will harden into things for us." Words are not themselves a reality, but only representations of it, and the King's English, like the Anglo-French of the Normans, is a class representation of reality. Perhaps it is worth trying to speak it, but it should not be laid down as an edict, and made immune to change from below.

So we may return to my beginning. Even with the most educated and the most literate, the King's English slips and slides in conversation. There is no worse conversationalist than the one who punctuates his words as he speaks as if he were writing, or even who tries to use words as if he were composing a piece of prose for print.

When E.M. Forster writes of "the sinister corridor of our age," we sit up at the vividness of the phrase, the force and even terror in the image. But if E.M. Forster sat in our living room and said, "We are all following each other down the sinister corridor of our age," we would be justified in asking him to leave.

The one place not to have dictionaries is in a sitting room or at a dining table. Look the thing up the next morning, but not in the middle of the conversation. Otherwise one will bind the conversation, one will not let it flow freely here and there. There would have been no conversation the other evening if we had been able to settle at once the meaning of "the King's English." We would never have gone to Australia, or leaped back in time to the Norman Conquest.

And there would have been nothing to think about the next morning. Perhaps above all, one would not have been engaged by interest in the musketeer who raised the subject, wondering more about her. The bother about teaching chimpanzees how to talk is that they will probably try to talk sense and so ruin all conversation.

STRAY FEATHERS

harold hosford

Can't they hear call of the north?

If I'd been able to find a taker I'd have wagered a guilder or two that April 19 was going to be the night. Fortunately, as things turned out, I didn't find a taker; April 19 wasn't the night.

"The night" I refer to is the night I figured a lot of the birds that had spent most of last winter with us would finally get the call and start north. Conditions, to my eye anyway, were right. The sour weather that had been passing itself off as spring had finally broken, skies had at last cleared and the wind had dropped off to nothing.

In short, if the birds were as good at measuring the weather as I, this was what they'd been waiting for.

There were signs, or so I thought, that my Golden-crowned Sparrows, at least, were thinking my way. As the sun went down that night they were fussing about in the pyracanthas. Mind you, they fussed around in those pyracanthas most nights, it's just that they were really chirping up a storm that night. And I figured they could mean only one thing — they'd heard the call of the north.

Well, to make a long story short, when I went out to replenish the feeder next morning, those Golden-crowns were still there, looking as if they had no intention of leaving.

* * *

Undaunted, I eyed the weather again on April 20 and calculated that if last night hadn't been the night, this one would be.

Again conditions were right — fine, calm weather and no signs of change for a couple of days. This time, despite the reluctance of my Golden-crowns to conform to my way of thinking, there was now plenty of evidence that other kinds of birds were. Among those signs was the group of Cowbirds that took over the feeder late in the day — the first of the season. Then there was that big flock of geese — White-fronts, I thought — beating northwesterly just before sunset. Between them they said "Migration," and with the third week of April upon us it was truly time to migrate.

Again, as dusk settled on the Hosford spread, those Golden-crowns were hopping in and out of the shrubbery acting as if they couldn't wait for dark to get on their way. My guilders were out again; this was to be the night!

Several hours later, I chanced to walk through the yard in the dark. All was quiet in the pyracanthas; Orion, as he should be at this time of year, was low in the west and, from the darkness overhead, gentle lisping sounds revealed that birds were migrating, as they should be at this time of year.

* * *

Among the sounds drifting down were the calls of the first migrant thrushes of the year. I was sure they'd have my Golden-crowned Sparrows as companions for part of their journey north, so I went to bed confident that another season of fattening-up Golden-crowns was over for me.

I was mistaken.

Next morning dawned bright and clear and the first thing I heard when I opened the window for a breath of cool, fresh morning air was the gentle, plaintive songs of several Golden-crowns.

My Golden-crowns? No doubt about it. They were doing all the things that my little band of Golden-crowns had been doing all winter. Most importantly, they were draped around the Garry Oak next door confident in the knowledge that I would soon appear with the day's rations — and that was a sure sign they were "my" Golden-crowns and not a new batch from farther south.

Well, it is now almost a week later. My two guilders are still safe in my pocket and my Golden-crowns are still with me. But tonight could be the night!

WE
JOBS

What government does won't help them

It's the little firms that make jobs

By NIGEL HAWKES

London Observer

A comprehensive study of how jobs are created, and lost, in the United States economy has come up with some striking answers. It suggests why government attempts to create new jobs, or stem the decline of old ones, have proved so expensive and so relatively unsuccessful.

The study was carried out at Massachusetts Institute of Technology by David L. Birch and published as a report, "The Job Generation Process."

Using records covering more than 5½ million different business enterprises (more than 80 per cent of all private sector employment in the U.S.), Birch shows that small, young companies, employing fewer than 20 people and less than five years old, are the most important source of new jobs. Yet these small companies tend to be shunned by banks and ignored by governments.

The study shows that two-thirds of all new jobs in the U.S. come from companies employing fewer than 20 people. And no fewer than four-fifths of all new jobs come from firms less than five years old.

Middle-sized and large companies, which are much easier for governments to deal with, provide few new jobs. And firms with a stable record, showing neither dramatic improvements nor catastophic declines in their performance — and therefore those with which governments feel most comfortable - are the least likely to create new jobs.

"The job-generating firm tends to be small. It tends to be dynamic (or unstable, depending on your viewpoint) . . . It tends to be young. In short, the firms that can and do generate the most jobs are the ones that are the most difficult to reach through conventional policy initiatives," Birch concludes.

He says nothing much can be done to prevent the decline of jobs, which happens at a standard rate of about 8 per cent a year across the U.S., showing little variation between North and South, cities and suburbs. What does vary, and what can in theory be influenced by governments, is that rate at which new jobs are created.

Close study of the experience of firms between 1969 and 1976 shows that the biggest gains in jobs are not to be expected in firms which have done well in the past. A firm which had shown consistent expansion over the first five years of the period showed a greater chance of declining in the last two than one which had had a less successful record.

On Language

An intriguing business, these words

An item in this space a couple of weeks ago pointing to the distinction between ANXIOUS (worried, apprehensive, anticipating with dread) and EAGER (ardent, impatient, anticipating with joy) touched a chord in more readers than on any other subject except "who-whom" (The whomniks are an organized lobby, from who we can soon expect a single-issue candidate).

"Uptight and anxious" was the way Billy Carter's personal physician, Dr. Paul Broun, described his patient, using "anxious" correctly, from its roots in ANGST and the Latin word for "pain." Billy was anxious about an FBI investigation and certainly not eager to testify.

Yet "anxious to" is often used to express anticipation with enthusiasm, and without the fear of pain; does this common usage make it right? Sir Ernest Gowers, in his revision of Fowler's "Modern English Usage," thinks so: he calls the use of "anxious" to mean "eager" a "natural development" and the difference now negligible. On the other hand, William and Mary Morris in the Harper Dictionary of Contemporary Usage hold that "careful speakers use ANXIOUS when some doubt or worry exists ("She is ANXIOUS because the plane is long overdue") and EAGER when the mood is one of joyous anticipation ("I am EAGER to hear the awards announced").

We cannot say that the use of ANXIOUS minus its ANGST is incorrect — in the end usage calls the tune — but we can say that people who know the difference and use the word precisely are more expressive of their meaning. I am anxious about my use of "who" a few paragraphs back; a whomnik would be eager to correct me.

A little band of wilful men and women, with no constituency but their own, are anxious about the fuzzying-up of English and eager to make an issue out of anxious-eager. Hats off to them; the fight may be a loser, but it is the good fight to call attention to the beauty of precision in speech.

* * *

The useful rhetorical technique of ostentation-rejection is back with us.

Government staffers know the trick of "Option Three," which presents the boss with a series of choices, called options, in such a way as to dictate the only sensible choice: for example, option one could be "abject surrender," and option five "nuclear holocaust," steering the decision-maker toward Option Three, which is the staffer's preferred course.

BILLY . . . anxious alright

By rejecting extremes, the speaker puts himself in the mainstream and invites his listeners to join him there. In a recent foreign policy speech, President Carter set up a few "myths" to reject, placing himself — and his audience — on the side of reality. And on his successful Mideast shuttle, before achieving what was universally dubbed a "breakthrough," he turned to the classic middle-way speech:

"For the past 24 hours I have been writing different versions of this speech. I have discarded the speech of despair; I have discarded the speech of glad tidings and celebration; I have decided to deliver the speech of concern and caution and hope."

It was not hard to empathize with the speechwriter who submitted all three drafts. In my own speechwriting days, it was my job to go into the Oval Office and say to the president "Sir — take the easy way. Do the popular thing." This enabled me to submit a draft that said, "Some of my advisers have suggested I take the easy way, and do the popular thing. I have rejected that advice . . ."

* * *

Two weeks ago, this column promised to examine "the intriguing roots" of words. A Times colleague, Arthur Gelb, remarked he hoped I had used "intriguing" correctly — not as merely "fascinating" but as "mysterious; illicit; baffling."

The trouble was I had meant "fascinating." Glumly, I looked it up in Merriam-Webster's Second Unabridged (the Third is too permissive for me). Sure enough, "intriguing" has the same Latin root as "intricate," and its meanings were spead over "complicated," "beguiling" and "arousing curiousity."

The American Heritage dictionary gives the reason for this problem: "Intrigue, as a transitive verb in the sense of arousing interest or curiosity, has been established on a popular level since the 1920s. It has been resisted by writers on usage, however, usually on the ground that it tends to displace words that would convey the desired sense more sharply."

Turning to a favorite "writer on usage," I find Theodore Bernstein explaining that he frowns on using "intrigue" as only "interesting" or "fascinating" because, "first, it is an erroneous borrowing from French, in which the word means "puzzle"; second, 'intrigue' has become a kind of fuzzy, all-purpose word to express meanings for which there are already precise words like 'mystify,' 'enchant,' 'interest,' 'pique' and 'excite.'"

That was a worthwhile usage defence, but the dictionaries say the fight is lost. Although, as a verb, "to intrigue" still means "to plot," or "to make intricate and mysterious plans," as a participle, Webster's New World, as well as in Merriam-Webster's Eighth Collegiate, the primary meaning is given as "fascinating." "Intriguing" has come to mean "fascinating."

NATIONAL ENERGY BOARD
NOTICE OF HEARING
IN THE MATTER OF TOLLS, TARIFFS AND FINANCING OF FOOTHILLS PIPE LINES (YUKON) LTD.

WHEREAS pursuant to the National Energy Board Act, the tolls to be charged by Foothills must be just and reasonable,

AND WHEREAS pursuant to the Northern Pipeline Act, the Board may approve the form and content of a tariff filed at the time the financing of the pipeline is being considered,

AND WHEREAS Foothills has filed a submission on the form and content of the tariff for the pipeline dated 21 March 1979 and, at the request of the Board, additional information dated 21 March 1979,

AND WHEREAS Foothills has applied to have certain expenses incurred prior to 1 January 1979 included in its rate base,

AND WHEREAS the National Energy Board has issued a "Proposed Method for the Regulation of Tolls and Tariffs of the Foothills Pipeline," on 18 April 1979, and wishes to receive the views of Foothills and interested parties on this proposal,

AND WHEREAS the National Energy Board has issued a "Proposed Approach to Incentive Rate of Return for the Northern Pipeline" on 5 October 1978 and has received submissions on it and reissued its "Proposed Approach to Incentive Rate of Return for the Northern Pipeline" on 24 January 1979, and deems it desirable to hold a public hearing for the purpose of issuing regulations on the Incentive Rate of Return scheme,

AND WHEREAS Foothills has announced its intent to prebuild the southern segments of the pipeline, for which segments the form and content of the tariff and the tolls to be charged during the initial period may be different from those during the later period when Alaskan gas is flowing,

AND WHEREAS the financing of the pipeline including any prebuilt segments has not yet been established to the satisfaction of the Board pursuant to condition 12 of Schedule III of the Northern Pipeline Act,

TAKE NOTICE that the Board has ordered that a public hearing shall be held commencing on Tuesday, the 12th day of June, 1979, at 9:30 a.m. in the Hearing Room of the National Energy Board, Trebla Building, 473 Albert Street, in the City of Ottawa, in the Province of Ontario, for the purpose of hearing evidence respecting tariffs and tolls charged by Foothills, the Incentive Rate of Return scheme, financing, and other related matters. Such proceeding will be conducted in either of the two official languages and simultaneous interpretation will be provided should a party to the proceedings request such facilities in his intervention.

AND THE BOARD HAS FURTHER ORDERED THAT:

1. Evidence and submissions shall be heard in three phases:

PHASE I—

(a) to enable the Board to determine whether the National Energy Board's Proposed Method for the Regulation of Tolls and Tariffs of the Foothills Pipeline dated 18 April 1979 is an appropriate regulatory method for regulating Foothills' transportation tolls and charges; and

(b) to enable the Board to determine whether the form and content of the Proposed Tariff for the pipeline, filed on 21 March 1979 by Foothills Pipe Lines (Yukon) Ltd., is an appropriate method to use in the determination of just and reasonable transportation tolls for the movement of gas through Zones 1 to 11 of the Canadian Segment of the Alaska Highway Gas Pipeline System;

(c) to enable the Board, upon reading Foothills application dated 12 April 1979, to determine whether certain preliminary expenditures made up to 31 December 1978, as recorded in the books of account of The Alberta Gas Trunk Line Company Limited, Westcoast Transmission Company Limited, Alberta Natural Gas Company Ltd., Foothills Pipe Lines Ltd. and Foothills Pipe Lines (Yukon) Ltd. and its subsidiary companies, up to that date, qualify for inclusion in the Rate Base of Foothills Pipe Lines (Yukon) Ltd. and its subsidiary companies for the Alaska Highway Gas Pipeline System in Canada;

PHASE II—

(d) to enable the Board to determine whether the form and content of the Proposed Tariff, to be filed by Foothills by 1 May 1979, is an appropriate method to use in the determination of just and reasonable tolls for the movement of Alberta gas through the proposed southern portion (the portion to be prebuilt) of the Alaska Highway Gas Pipeline System;

PHASE III—

(e) to finalize the approach to Incentive Rate of Return for the Northern Pipeline; and

(f) to establish to the satisfaction of the Board that financing has been obtained for the pipeline and for any prebuilt sections of the pipeline, pursuant to Condition 12 of Schedule III of the Northern Pipeline Act.

The date for the commencement of Phase II and Phase III will be announced later.

2. Any respondent or intervenor intending to oppose or intervene in the said hearing shall on or before the 1st day of June, 1979, file with the Secretary of the Board thirty (30) copies of a written statement, in either of the two official languages, containing his reply or submission together with any supportng information, particulars or documents, which shall include a concise statement of the facts from which the nature of the respondent's or intervenor's interest in the proceedings may be determined, which may admit or deny any or all of the facts alleged in the submission and/or additional information filed by Foothills and which shall be endorsed with the name and address of the respondent or intervenor or his solicitor to whom communications may be sent. Any respondent or intervenor shall, on or before the 1st day of June 1979, serve three (3) copies of his reply or submission and supporting information, particulars or documents upon Foothills and one (1) copy upon each of the Attorneys-General of the Provinces of British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Ontario, and Quebec, upon the Commissioner of the Yukon Territory and the Commissioner of the Northwest Territories, and upon the United States Federal Energy Regulatory Commission,
3. In order to make potential interested parties in the United States aware of the proceedings, the National Energy Board has served copies of the notice of this hearing on all parties of record in the United States Federal Regulatory Commission Docket CP 78-123 et al, a proceeding on the United States portion of the Alaska Highway Gas Pipeline Project.
4. The National Energy Board Rules of Practice and Procedure shall apply mutatis mutandis to the proceedings.
5. Any interested party may examine copies of
   (a) the submission and additional information filed by Foothills on the form and content of the tariff.

BCGEU Wants More Money

BURNABY (CP) — The B.C. Government Employees Union wants to renegotiate salaries immediately in its current contract with the provincial government.

The executive of the union, which represents 38,000 B.C. government employees, unanimously passed a motion Friday calling for negotiations under provisions of a clause which is triggered when the annual cost of living in Canada rises above eight per cent.

Union general secretary John Fryer said the latest six-month figures show a cost-of-living increase of 5.1 per cent, which calculated on an annual rate triggers the reopener clause.

CUPE Pickets Halt Flights

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — CP Air has cancelled service to this community after members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE) began picketing the dock used by a ferry that carries busloads of airline passengers to the nearby Digby Island airport. The dock is maintained by CUPE workers.

Airline passengers now must make a two-hour bus trip to Terrace, which is also serviced by CP Air. Reporters covering Premier Bill Bennett's election campaign were also diverted to Terrace this week, and the premier's party had to make several changes in landing plans to avoid areas being picketed.

Meanwhile, conservation officer Ralph Escott has asked people not to pile their garbage outside as bears, now coming out of hibernation, might be attracted to it.

Refuse has been piling up in backyards and behind businesses since April 17 when 185 inside and outside workers walked out in a dispute that centres on wages. As well as halting garbage pickup, the strike has closed the civic centre and swimming pool.

Clerical and telecommunications staff at the RCMP detachment are also off the job but a police spokesman said it has caused no serious problems.

The union wants a $1-an-hour raise retroactive to Jan. 1 and another 30 cents in two raises later this year. The city has offered 90 cents from the beginning of the year and 15 cents more for outside workers beginning July 1.

CP Air spokesman Jim Langridge said the airline has urged the city to seek an injunction against the ferry dock pickets. However, Mayor Peter Lester said the city would not do so.

"The flights will just have to be diverted to Terrace. The result of this is that the general public will be more angry than otherwise with the strikers."

Barrett a Liar - Bennett

Premier Bill Bennett warned British Columbia voters Friday they cannot trust Dave Barrett because he told untruths about the cash holdings of the Insurance Corp. of B.C. (ICBC), in the strongest statement of his otherwise low-key campaign this week.

Bennett said in a Victoria interview that Barrett knows the cash reserves held by ICBC are not surplus money, but funds that must be held for payments on policy holders' claims.

Barrett earlier said ICBC's cash reserve of $521 million is too high and that an NDP government would lend all but $150 - $200 million to municipalities for public works.

The premier said Barrett also didn't tell the truth before the 1975 election, because he said ICBC wouldn't lose money, when it later showed a $175 million loss.

Bennett was to speak to the Inter-Cultural Association of Greater Victoria at noon today. It was billed as a non-political speech, as it was arranged prior to the election being called.

$150M Expansion Of Northwood Mill

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Northwood Pulp and Timber Ltd. Friday announced a $150-million expansion that will double the size of its pulp mill here.

Managing director Carl Frantz said the expansion will create 150 new jobs and allow a drastic increase in its production of 800 tons of pulp a day.

Construction could start this fall if government approval is granted and the final economic evaluation is still favorable.

Frantz said the project would employ an average of between 300 and 400 construction workers over a two to three year period, with peak employment reaching 1,000.

He said the two most important factors in the company's decision to expand were the impact of Canadian-United States dollar exchange rates and the stable labor relations climate at the mill.

More Neighborhood Input: Barber

An NDP government would alter participation on the Provincial Capital Commission so neighborhood groups would be guaranteed input on development in the Greater Victoria area.

Speaking to about 75 senior citizens at the Victoria riding's first all candidates' meeting in James Bay Friday, NDP indumbent Charles Barber said such a move would ensure active community groups are not ignored when the province and municipal councils are discussing development projects.

Barber was responding to a question from one pensioner who initially asked Sam Bawlf, Socred incumbent and head of the capital commission, why citizens of James Bay weren't consulted before so many changes were made in the area under the auspices of the commission.

Expansion of Ogden Point facilities and moving the Coho to the James Bay side has caused a considerable increase in traffic in the already crowded area, she told Bawlf.

Bawlf said it would be inappropriate for the provincial government to short-circuit the proper avenue of working with the municipal representatives on the Capital Commission by negotiating directly with the individual areas.

Six of Victoria's seven candidates for the two seats in the May 10 provincial election spoke to the Old Age Pensioners at the New Horizons centre.

Only Socred hopeful Mayor Mike Young, who earlier this week said if elected he would keep his mayoralty job and full salary since his municipal work wouldn't interfere with his provincial duties, failed to show.

Bawlf told the gathering Young was all set to attend, but he had to cancel at the last minute because of urgent civic business.

Barber's running mate, Gordon Hanson, said that because of the irresponsibility of the Socred government — particularly Bawlf who was Recreation and Conservation Minster up to last December — Victorians soon will be paying $10 a pound for salmon.

The provincial government failed to control the influx of foreign licenses in the fish processing industry so British Columbians will be forced to buy their own salmon from the Japanese, he said.

Bawlf said Hanson has his facts all mixed up and he "wouldn't dignify those comments with any further discussion."

Conservative candidates Maggi Lynn and Jack Lindsay both stressed the importance of keeping a third party alive as an alternative to the teeter-totter exchange between the Socreds and NDP.

The Tories owe nothing to either labor or big business, Miss Lynn said. "We owe only you, the people who vote for us."

Michael Easton, running for the Western Independence Party, was honest enough to admit one of the reasons he's running is because he needs a job.

Putting a WIP member in the B.C. legislature would send a loud, clear voice to Ottawa that the province was prepared to stick up for its rights.

Orange Rain Falls on Yalta

MOSCOW (AP) — Orange rain fell on the Crimean city of Yalta recently, and Soviet scientists speculated the clouds contained dust picked up in Turkey and carried across the Black Sea, the newspaper Trud said. It said about 1.3 centimetres of rain fell in the 90-miute downpour, leaving a thick layer of rust-colored dust when it dried.

Not a Warning on NDP

B.C. '79

VANCOUVER (CP) — The president of a Vancouver mining firm said Friday he was not warning people to vote against the New Democratic Party when he said a $150-million mining project could be threatened if the party won the May 10 provincial election.

Dr. Norman Keevil of Teck Corp. said it was "a bit embarrassing" that the announcement of the development on the company's Highmont copper-molybdenum property, 65 kilometres southwest of Kamloops, came during the election campaign.

Keevil's statements appeared to clash with reported statements by Teck chairman Roland Mitchener, the former governor-general, who said the same day in Toronto that the project is not conditional on Social Credit's re-election.

"My statements were not polictical, they were economic," he said.

Keevil said earlier that Teck might be forced to refinance the project if the NDP renewed increased royalties legislation, which the party introduced when it was in power from 1972 to 1975. The Social Credit government has since cut the royalties, saying they had caused a decrease in mining exploration.

Barrett has said if the NDP is re-elected it will not reintroduce the same royalties legislation, but will put forward a more flexible program.

Keevil said Friday Barrett's proposal still concerns him.

If the NDP were elected and reimposed royalties as stiff as the previous ones, he said, the project may be in doubt because the royalties could remove the profit from the project which he called the largest single mining investment ever made in Canada.

Beware Hydro Policies, Barrett Warns Voters

B.C. '79

NELSON (CP) — British Columbians must beware of B.C. Hydro energy policies because the utility is a self-serving Juggernaut telling them what to do, New Democrat leader Dave Barrett said Friday night.

"Hydro is a spoiled child," he told a partisan New Democratic Party audience. "It is beginning to think it is the parent."

He said the independent B.C. Energy Commission estimates that power demands will grow by 3.5 per cent a year but Hydro says that figure should be nearly doubled.

"Hydro has assumed it will expand by 6.2 per cent a year," he told a May 10 provincial election rally supporting Lorne Nicolson, NDP candidate in Nelson-Creston.

"Just two years ago, Hydro's projection was an even more outrageous 9.2 per cent a year. If Hydro is allowed to expand at the inflated rate of 6.2 per cent as opposed to 3.5 per cent Hydro will end up building the equivalent of an extra 2½ Revelstoke dams by 1980 at an extra cost of $3.7 billion that will be tacked onto consumer rates."

The speech was a continuation of Barrett's attack on Hydro policies he began earlier in Trail when he told construction workers at Hydro's Seven-Mile Dam across the Pend D'Oreille River that B.C. must develop thermal energy from Hat Creek Coal and leave nuclear power alone.

Also to be left alone are rivers which are not currently blocked by power dams. Only secondary dams would be constructed to make maximum use of dams that already exist.

Barrett quoted from a Hydro publication on power prospects that said the Crown utility believes nuclear power cannot be ignored as an energy source. The publication said accident probabilities are extremely low.

"Harrisburg: B.C. Hydro got a message for you — it didn't happen," he said of the radiation leak at the Pennsylvania plant. "The chances were too low for it to happen."

Asked if an NDP government would fire Hydro chairman Robert Bonner who has said the utility of a nuclear power plant will be needed within 10 years, Barrett said that Bonner, a former Social Credit cabinet minister, probably would offer his resignation.

Barrett said an NDP government would make Hydro more responsible to the people. The energy commission would control Hydro energy planning, and rate increases would go before public hearings.

Ceilings would be placed on Hydro borrowings and the public iquiry into the utility's rate structure would seek ways to end residential subsidies to industry which gets cheaper rates because it uses higher volumes of electricity.

B.C. energy needs would be considered ahead of power exports.

"We must never lock ourselves into selling cheap power to the United States again."

Barrett also said there would be government programs to encourage energy conservation because it is cheaper than developing new energy sources. Alternate energy sources such as solar and wind power and use of wood waste to generate electricity also would be studied.

He also dealt with local issues in the riding where real estate developer Hank Coleman is trying again to unseat Nicolson who beat him by 1,767 votes in 1975.

Barrett said the NDP would make David Thompson University Centre (formerly Notre Dame University) a four-year university administered locally.

Street Name Discarded

PORT MOODY (UPC) — A development company's proposal to name a street in a new sub-division was dropped when an alderman discovered the street was to be named after a company secretary, a city hall spokesman said Friday.

Ald. Bert Flinn objected to the choice of "Lexie Court" for the street in a suburban area 46 kilometres east of Vancouver when he discovered "Lexie" was the name of a secretary working in the company's office.

The developer has agreed to meet with the city's historical committee to come up with "a more appropriate name," the spokesman said.

MDs Face Poverty In 10 Years: BCMA

VANCOUVER (CP) — If doctors do not get a fee increase greater than the inflation rate, the quality of medical services in British Columbia will suffer, says Dr. Alex Mandeville of the B.C. Medical Association.

Mandeville said in a telephone interview Friday that if doctors continue to receive the same percentage increases as in past years "they will be just above the poverty line in 10 years."

Increases since 1971, he said, have varied from 5 per cent to 13 per cent.

He doubts, however, that doctors in B.C. will follow their Ontario counterparts, some of whom have dropped out of that province's medical care program.

Mandeville, a Penticton ear, nose and throat specialist, was elected April 25 to become president-elect May 11. In May, 1980, he automatically becomes president of the 4,200-member association.

"Doctors have been falling behind everyone else since the provincial government declared a moratorium on fee increases in 1971. After that year, increases were no longer tied to increases in the cost of living."

Since then doctors have been working harder, putting in longer hours and spending less time in consultation to make up for erosion of their net income, he said.

They now have reached their limit, he said. Future fee increases will have to be "well above the 9.2 per cent annual rate of inflation" to avoid a drop in the quality of service.

Any future increases, he said, also must include a provision for catching up.

Vandals' Second Visit Ends It

SURREY (CP) — When vandals struck Jean-Claude Cartelier's struggling French restaurant the first time, he bravely cleaned up the mess, absorbed the loss and kept on going.

But when they struck again two weeks later and caused more than $2,000 damage, it was too much and, with tears in his eyes, he gave up.

Cartelier and partner Eddy Husting are just two of a number of businesses in this suburb east of Vancouver that have been repeatedly hit by young vandals.

He and Husting struggled for 16 months to build a reputation by doing the cooking themselves and building friendships with their customers.

But one night last month, the Saffron was hit by a couple of thieves who broke in, cooked themselves a meal of sole and shrimp, scorched the grill, smashed the cigarette machine, spoiled the food that was left and helped themselves to the French wine.

It cost the owners $2,000.

The second time, the thieves stole the entire liquor supply and smashed a window — costing the owners another $2,000 and more business.

Cartelier said customers urged them to stay open but they didn't have the heart.

'Progress' In Press Talks

VANCOUVER (UPC) — Vancouver Sun publisher Clark Davey said Friday some "progress" has been made in negotiations to resolve a labor dispute that has left this major city without its two daily newspapers for five months.

Pacific Press, publishers of the afternoon Sun and morning Province, resumed contract talks after the pressmen's union withdrew Monday from the Joint Council of Unions negotiating for all newspaper employees.

"The talks have made progress and negotiators are discussing economic issues," Davey said. He declined further comment, a position taken by both sides of the bargaining table.

Okanagan Dog Victim Of Dread Corona Virus

VERNON (CP) — A dog that died here this morning was probably the first victim in this Okanagan city of a virus that has spread across North America since being identified about three years ago in New York, said veterinarian Dr. Terry Quesnel.

Quesnel said tissues have been sent to Vancouver for positive identification, but he believes the dog was a victim of corona virus which attacks the lining of dogs' stomachs and intestines.

"The symptoms of the virus include bleeding from the mouth, bloody vomit and severe bloody diarrhea," Quesnel said. "Dogs stricken with the disease are also lethargic, depressed, don't eat and drop weight quickly.

"Death can occur within 24 hours."

Quesnel said there is no vaccination against the virus and stricken dogs must be treated immediately.

"If the dog is brought to a veterinarian soon after contacting the virus, we have about a 50-per-cent chance of saving it," he said. "If the dog owner decides to treat the animal himself, the dog will die.

"We can only save some of the dogs by whole blood transfusions and extended treatment. It is the only chance that the animals have."

tive tritium were released into the containment system.

Under Atomic Energy Control Board regulations, Candu reactors must start reducing power if deuterium concentrations reach four per cent and the reactor must be shut down if concentrations reach six per cent.

The document said concentrations as high as 27 per cent have been measured at the Bruce plant, which is located about 145 kilometres north of London, Ont.

The seven reports deal with occurrences at all three units in operation at the generating station between July, 1977 and last January, when a fourth unit went into operation.

Written by staff on duty when the events occurred, they were intended to be seen only by the Atomic Energy Control Board and operational staff who would investigate the problems and attempt solutions.

Ontario Hydro and the board have refused to make such reports public because they contain the names of operating personnel and preliminary conclusions that may be discounted following further investigation.

Cecil Morris, a spokesman for Ontario Hydro, said Hydro will appear before members of the select committee to discuss the implications and significance of the documents.

He said six of the seven events referred to in the documents have been summarized in quarterly reports on file at Hydro's public resource centre in Toronto. The seventh event occurred last January and will be included in the first quarterly report for 1979.

All of the events were reported to the board and corrective action was taken where necessary, he said. None posed any radiation risk.

The documents showed that the loss of normal feedwater — the first event at Three Mile Island — has occurred more than once at the Bruce plant.

A similar incident occurred on July 28, 1977, at the Bruce plant when the auxiliary pump failed to start because of equipment failure, the documents said.

The documents also showed that it was recently discovered that rupture discs were installed backwards in all four Bruce reactors.

"This meant that the discs would only burst if the pressure was twice the design pressure," the letter said.

It said Bruce reactors were shut down to make the necessary repairs but there is no guarantee that preheater tubes will not develop leaks.

Grant Childerhose of Hydro's nuclear generating division confirmed that the discs had been installed backwards, but said they would have burst at pressures only slightly above design levels.

He denied the allegation that the stack monitoring system has never been operational.

Smith also told the committee that he met earlier this week with a group which contended that boilers made by Babcock and Wilcox Canada Ltd. of Cambridge, Ont., and being installed at the Pickering nuclear plant just east of Toronto, were not constructed properly.

May 13 Fixed For TV Debate

OTTAWA (CP) — The way has been cleared for a two-hour television debate among the leaders of the three major parties in the May 22 election.

It will be held between 8 p.m. and 10 p.m. May 13 on the CBC and CTV national networks and Global TV of Ontario.

There will be three debates of 30 minutes in this order:

Conservative Leader Joe Clark and New Democrat Leader Ed Broadbent; Prime Minister Trudeau and Broadbent; Trudeau and Clark.

The remaining time will be used up in opening and closing statements.

Three television journalists will be on hand but under agreements worked out Friday they will have little part in the debate.

The Conservatives had strongly objected to the use of reporters and insisted on limiting their participation.

Clark's objections have held up agreement on the debate for the last two weeks. He first objected to Broadbent receiving equal treatment to the other leaders.

When the television networks proposed a format under which Trudeau and Clark would meet face to face, the Conservatives approved in principle.

But they still objected about the use of reporters. That objection was resolved Friday.

B.C. HYDRO'S AERIAL THERMOGRAPHY DISPLAY UNTIL MAY 5TH, LOWER MAIN FLOOR

Come in and see whether your home is losing heat — and costing you money — because of poor attic and roof insulation.

On display, you'll see thermograms (or photos) produced from an aerial infrared scan taken last year of homes and buildings in the Victoria area. Those homes which appear jet black in the photos are well insulated; those appearing light grey or white are victims of heat loss.

To identify your home in the prints, be sure you know how many houses yours is from the nearest corner.

B.C. Hydro representatives are in attendance to help interpet the thermogram and to offer information. There is also a computer terminal at the display to offer on-the-spot assistance in beating the high cost of heat.

What do you do when those with the cash to hand out all agree you're doing a splendid job — but don't want to pay anything to help you do it better?

That's the dilemma being faced by the people at the Victoria READ Society.

It was more than two years ago that I first wrote of the problems of the Reading Evaluation and Development Society and, while some things have changed, the problems haven't. The teachers dedicated to helping both adults and children with learning disabilities were short of funds then and they're short of funds now.

What has changed is the special school's location and size. It has grown from 40 to more than 60 students ranging in age from six to the middle 40s and now has three full-time, one half-time and two part-time teachers and a secretary plus the co-ordinator and diagnostician, Mario Strauss, who took over last August.

From cramped quarters in an old church building, then to rented premises near Beacon Hill Park, the society moved last fall to a large house it bought on Linden Street.

"We scraped up enough for a down payment," Strauss, who was born in Chile and worked in the public school system in the B.C. Interior, explained. "But now we have huge mortgage payments of more than $800 a month."

To meet that amount, pay for heat, light and water, give a small salary increase long overdue to the teachers, and help some of the poorer families with the fees, Strauss reckons they'd need a grant of around $20,000.

In today's terms, that doesn't seem very much but READ, hasn't yet been able to get anyone to pay it. And boy, they've tried!

Things got so bad back in December, in fact, the teachers held a meeting with parents of students and talked about closing the school down.

"Then we got a couple of grants from the Vancouver Foundation and the Bronfman Foundation as well as an assessment grant from the Victoria School Board," Strauss explains. "So we managed to struggle along and keep going. But they were only temporary things."

From its inception in June, 1976, the READ Society has struggled for recognition and assistance from both the Education Department and the Department of Health. Officials got the recognition okay, but no cash.

"Health authorities and those at Human Resources say it's an education matter and the Education Department says it can only give help through a school board," Strauss says in a frustrated tone. "They all say we're doing a wonderful job — but still we haven't had much luck in getting funds."

Strauss has applied three times for assistance from provincial lottery funds but so far hasn't heard back.

The Society has been able to get a Canada Works grant to stage a summer school starting July 3 at both the Linden Street school and their new branch in Sidney. Made up of two 18-day sessions, the intensive learning program will benefit both the students and the young student teachers the society will employ during the summer.

That's fine for the summer but it's the rest of the year that the READ Society people worry about. For three hourly lessons a week, a student pays $100 a month. Though that may not be overly expensive in terms of things like piano lessons and getting your car fixed, there are still many who need the school and just can't afford it.

There are those who can afford it, of course, like one adult student who owns his own contracting business.

"When you meet him he is perfectly charming and appears competent," Strauss says. "But he is totally illiterate. He sees words as pictures and has spent all his life guessing them. When we tested him, he couldn't spell and or sell and wasn't able to read words like jet, dim, mix or God."

For that man, help is on the way. But it's all those who maybe can't afford the extra tuition they need that the READ Society wants to reach. And it wants the financial help to be able to do it.

Mario Strauss looks concerned.

"You know, we're in the business of teaching the basics of how to read and write," he says. "That's our main job and we can tell a student exactly how much progress is made every three months.

"But just as important as this academic progress, is the fact that children or adults see the improvement in themselves as people and they begin to see themselves as learners rather than failures."

Youth Parties Rock Saanich

Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier said today police patrols at liquor outlets may have to be stepped up to combat an alarming increase in rowdy beach and house parties in the municipality.

His comment came after Saanich police reported receiving a record 72 complaints concerning noisy youths and youths drinking in a 12-hour period overnight. There were 30 similar complaints in the Colwood area and six in the city over the same period.

The number of complaints was by far the highest of the year for the Saanich force.

Yet a senior police official warned this morning that the worst is still to come as the fine weather continues and summer approaches.

Couvelier, chairman of the police board, said he is concerned about the incidence of rowdyism and drunkenness among youth but felt the emphasis should be placed on the source of the problem — the liquor store outlets.

"It looks like we are going to have to step up the liquor store end of enforcement and following up with each liquor store personnel," he said. "Juveniles should not be getting this stuff."

A Saanich police spokesman said officers feel hamstrung in dealing with the problem since the police board has cut overtime from its budget which would have allowed the establishment of a beach patrol.

Couvelier said the policemen's complaints about the lack of overtime were "self-serving."

"Were the board to be satisfied the department is doing everything it could to minimize the problems then the request for additional financial support would probably be considered," he said.

Couvelier said overtime was cut because of the tremendous cost factor. Last year the Saanich force's overtime ratio was among the highest in the province.

In 1977 the board allocated $22,000 for beach patrols. The figure was increased to $30,000 last year but because of the beer strike less than a third was used. This year the board dropped the item completely from its budget.

Couvelier said police alone cannot hope to tackle the problem. It is a community responsibility.

In addition, he said, judges and prosecutors have to be made more aware of the concern and start taking a no-nonsense approach.

Around the Ridings

It's a Gracious Battle for Victoria

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The respect the candidates have for each other in two-seat Victoria riding amounts almost to fear — and yet, being Victorians, they are very gentlemanly about it.

"Charles Barber is a tremendous organizer," one Socred campaign worker laments, "but how can you attack him when he spends most of his time helping little old ladies across the street?"

The NDP in turn is having a tough time drawing a bead on Socreds Sam Bawlf and Mike Young.

This gracious approach spills over into the hustings where wealthy Rockland executives shake hands with NDP campaigners and wish them well.

Meanwhile, Socred Mike Young, knocking on doors in NDP country, has to turn down repeated invitations to come in for a spot of tea.

The Victoria campaign got about as angry as it's likely to get when Bawlf spluttered from a public platform that Barber is "not a fair-minded MLA."

And Socred campaign workers are spreading the word that Barber's running mate, Gordon Hanson, is "too nice to be in politics."

Hanson replies: "If that's meant as criticism, I'm certainly not going to attack it."

Both major parties are wading through their complex election platforms but the voters appear to have already simplified the issues.

Says Gus Papaloukas of Central Barber Shop, 706 Broughton:

"Some customers say if the NDP gets in again it will take 15 years to pay all the debts.

"Others say the Socreds are ruthless — they have no heart. That seems to be the main issue.

"I think the NDP voters think you run a government like a Greek tavern — everyone comes in and helps himself to whatever he wants."

There are 61,200 registered voters in the riding, up about 9,000 from 52,226 in 1975.

Redistribution has added part of Victoria West and a bit of southern Saanich but extracted a section of the Gorge, which goes into Esquimalt-Port Renfrew.

Campaign organizers say the Gorge loss balances off about equally with the Saanich gain. The new element is Victoria West, a small but devotedly NDP area.

"This will help us," says Barber campaign chairman Diane Kennedy, "but possibly only a small amount. Those are our people but the turnout from Vic West is traditionally low. If we can get enough of them out, it might make a difference."

The riding has seven major areas.

James Bay: A mix of single family homes (in the west) and apartments near Beacon Hill Park. This is the centre of childless families: singles, young marrieds and retireds.

The elderly settle here because of the proximity of the park and the downtown core.

Fairfield: This area to the east of Beacon Hill Park is the most mobile in the region. Apartments, rooming houses and rented single family homes are predominant.

More than half the people in the general Fairfield area were not there when the last election was called three years ago, making predictions hazardous.

Waterfront and Rockland: The belt on Dallas Road, along the Oak Bay border and back along Rockland Avenue is the heart of Social Credit support in the riding. The running joke is that if there are any NDP voters here, they are servants. It is only a slight exaggeration.

East Fernwood: This area north of Victoria High school to Hillside is made up almost exclusively of single family homes. The NDP had a slight edge here in the last election. West Fernwood has a growing concentration of apartments along Cook Street.

Victoria West: This is a new addition to the riding. More than 50 per cent are for the NDP but voter turnout is low.

North of Hillside: This is a bewildering area for all parties. There are large pockets of ethnic groups, especially East Indians. They are friendly to politicians but not too interested in what they have to say. Many residents in this area say they are undecided and the voter turnout is fairly low.

Southern Saanich: This is also a new section for the riding. This was Social Credit country in the last provincial election, although the NDP did better here than in most parts of Saanich.

The crucial factor: More than 30 per cent of the voters in the riding are 60 or older.

The retired people who have recently arrived from Saskatchewan tend to vote NDP while those from Alberta tend towards Social Credit.

But there are thousands of others. Most of them were born and raised into the Liberal or Conservative party and now must decide provincially (in most cases) between the Socreds and the NDP.

These are the vote splitters. They can cheerfully cast one vote for socialism and another one for free enterprise.

Vote splitting has been the norm in Victoria in the 1970s.

Again in 1975 the vote was split. This time it was Socred Sam Bawlf leading the poll followed by Barber, the first NDPer ever elected in the riding.

What will happen this time?

"Well, it looks like Bawlf and Barber again," says John Rubelke, 62, who lives near Beacon Hill park.

"Everybody knows Charlie Barber. If anyone has a problem, they go to see Charlie. I don't know anything about this other NDP fellow — what's his name? — Hanson?

"I like the NDP but Social Credit has some good candidates running, too — Bawlf and the mayor (Young). They're all good candidates and it's a difficult choice."

John Horam, 80, is another Barber fan — but he's not going to vote for him.

"I've always supported the Progressive Conservative Party, especially in the federal field. Bawlf and Young are both very good candidates for this riding. I couldn't vote for Barber because I can't support the NDP."

The last-minute entry of two Conservative candidates and the Western Indepedence Party has confused things a bit but few voters give them much of a chance. They see it as a choice between the two major provincial parties.

The candidates, in the order they will appear on the ballot:

Sam Bawlf, Social Credit: A successful 34—year—old developer, possibly a millionaire, who has a reputation for getting things done. His performance at the helm of the B.C. Ferries fleet was summed up by Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce director Jack McKernan: "Somebody else might have done as well but nobody could have done better!"

Bawlf also has a reputation as a poll—topper, coming first in the city aldermanic race in 1974 and outpolling Barber in the 1975 provincial election.

Mike Young, Social Credit: Another poll—topper, Young is running very close to Bawlf in the early going. They can't both come first this time and, if another party split is in the works, it could be the most interesting race of the night to see if the Socred winner is Young or Bawlf. Young ran for alderman in 1971, topping the poll in his first try. He did it again in 1973, which encouraged him to run (successfully) for mayor in 1975. He was re—elected mayor in 1977 by acclamation.

Charles Barber, NDP: Praised by the man—on—the street, mainly older citizens, he is feared by Social Credit campaigners as one of the best NDP organizers in the province. Barber began to achieve fame with Cool—Aid, which among other things arranged for young people to help older Victorians by driving them to meetings or on shopping trips.

His constituency office on Blanshard is operating on a year—around basis and many Social Credit supporters have thanked him for his personal help. It is this kind of approach that helped Barber to get in on a split vote last time.

Gordon Hanson, NDP: The unknown candidate as far as most voters are concerned, Hanson was staff representative for the B.C. Government Employees Union until he resigned to contest the election. He has been active on a low-profile basis in community groups and within the party.

He has led the attack on Young for not resigning as mayor, saying anyone running for office should be prepared to make it a full-time job.

This has been the only purely local issue to make any impact in Victoria.

W. Jack Lindsay, Progressive Conservative: Manager of the Real Estate and Insurance Credit Union, he comes from a dedicated Tory family and has hopes of reviving the party as a free enterprise alternative.

Margaret (Maggi) Lynn, Progressive—Conservative: An outspoken veteran radio and TV broadcaster working in Victoria on a freelance basis. She is a noted advocate of causes which, while not lost, may be considered longshots.

Michael Easton, Western Independence Party: A former disc jockey, he is unemployed at the moment but is acting as publicity agent for his party. His platform is basically federal, arguing that B.C. needs a better deal from Ottawa.

At NDP and Social Credit campaign headquarters, there are more frowns than smiles. Both sides are nervous, almost fearful, about the possible result.

Both sides expect Barber to outpoll Hanson but that could lead to almost anything — both NDP candidates winning or both losing — with all sorts of combinations in between.

Social Credit canvassing was just getting under way at time of writing and it was not known whether Bawlf was running ahead of Young. The assumption going in was that they would be very close, with a slight edge to Bawlf, because of his reputation as a man who has achieved many things for the city.

NDP organizers say their plan comes down to this: Barber will win. The task is to get Hanson elected.

Socreds are trying to get both their people elected but the depth of their concern is evident everywhere. Every other sentence at Social Credit party headquarters contains the name "Barber."

Looking at things from a distance, Victoria Ald. Bill Tindall said he would not be surprised to see Bawlf and Barber re-elected once more on a split vote.

As manager of the Better Business Bureau, he has his own free enterprise preferances, and has served with both Young and Bawlf on council, but he also admires the work of Barber at the grass roots level and rates him a powerful campaigner.

From the other side, Ald. Larry Ryan also sees the possibility of a split vote.

"As secretary of the Victoria Labor Council, I am hardly a neutral observer. I am supporting all NDP candidates in this area. But, my goodness, a cabinet minister and a popular mayor (running for Social Credit). That is a very formidable team."

On the other hand, he said, Barber's organizational abilities and his record as a worker should get him back in.

"It promises to be a very interesting election."

Hockey Trips No Exercise In Futility

MOSCOW (CP) — Marshall Johnston doesn't like to see Canadian hockey players perpetual underlings at the world hockey championships, but he is realistic enough to know that under the present setup there is little chance the picture will change.

"I don't think coming over here and being beaten continually by the Russian and Czechs is an exercise in frustration," Johnston said Friday after Team Canada ended a five-game winless string against championship round opponents with a 6-3 victory over Sweden.

"I don't want to get into the politics of this thing," Johnston continued. "But we're a small country in a population sense.

"And of course we've lost some of our hockey prestige over the last few years. But as long as we have something to offer (hockey) then I feel we should keep coming."

Johnston was replying to arguments that unless Canada can provide a competitive team for the global event it should not send a team at all.

The Soviet Union retained the gold medal for the second straight year, rounding out an unbeaten schedule with a comfortable 6-1 victory over Czechoslovakia. Veteran Valery Kharlamov, probably making his last appearance in international hockey, scored two goals for the winners.

The medals had been determined Wednesday. The Russians took the gold with 12 points to seven for second-place Czechoslovakia, which had a tie with the Swedes as well as two losses to the Soviet Union. Sweden had three points in championship-round play, one more than Canada.

In the consolation tournament, which finished Thursday, Finland finished on top with nine points to seven for West Germany and six for the United States. Poland was last with two points and will drop to the B tournament next year, to be replaced by this year's B division winners, the Netherlands.

For the last three years, Canada has been represented at the world hockey championships by National Hockey League players whose teams either failed to make the playoffs or were eliminated in the first round.

Canada withdrew from world hockey championship tournaments after 1969 when the International Ice Hockey Federation refused to allow repatriated professionals in the lineup.

While Canada and the federation resumed diplomatic relations in 1972, it wasn't until 1977, at Vienna, that the Canadians returned to world hockey.

Johnston reacted to comments that the game of hockey played in North American pro arenas was lagging when compared to the sport's growth in Europe.

"I don't think there's all that much wrong with our game," he said. "But I would like to see us emphasize more the development of skills and personalities."

He also suggested that North American fans would see a more wide-open game if the centre red line was no longer used for two-line pass calls but retained for icing calls.

"That way we could put more motion into our game and enjoy the game as we see it in these tournaments."

Bobby Smith scored twice Friday in a four-goal outburst for Canada in the third period that ensured victory.

Smith and Al MacAdam, who scored the game's opening goal and drew three assists in the third period, emerged as the top Canadian scorers in the tournament, both with eight points. Smith led the goal-scorers with five.

SMU's Title Triumph Carries Some Regret

Friday's capture of the Howard Russell Cup by St. Michael's University School was something of a regretful victory.

Obviously, there was joy among SMU supporters as the independent school club took the Greater Victoria high school rugby championship and climaxed an undefeated season by defeating Oak Bay's Barbarians 19-10.

On the other side of the fence, and particularly with high school officials who appreciate "good tests," there was regret because the game at the University of Victoria's McCoy Road field means some of the quality is disappearing from the Greater Victoria league.

And quality is something the Mike Walsh-coached St. Michael's crew has provided over the past years.

They did it in all 26 games that made up St. Michael's demanding commitments to two leagues this season. SMU won all 26 while marching to its third Russell Cup victory in four years.

Playing in the two leagues (SMU also competes in the Independent Schools League) from September to the end of April, says Walsh, is too demanding. As a result, SMU announced earlier in the week that it is withdrawing from the Greater Victoria League.

Friday's game marked the swan song for the private school but the players still didn't let up on quality of play that they have provided the past few years.

SMU relied on speed and agility to offset the size and strength of the Barbarians. As a result, the Cup final was an open, entertaining contest, and very much in doubt until St. Michael's Don Fennerty came up with an alert interception and broke away for a try that wrapped it up.

SMU suffered a jolt after only about 10 minutes of play when Jamie Ellis, the starting fullback, suffered a dislocated shoulder. His replacement, 15-year-old Chris Snape, filled in admirably.

Johnston lauded his Barbarians.

"We played well," he said. "St. Michael's played a bit better."

Oak Bay certainly didn't lose it in the lineouts, where basketball standout Wayne Andrews dominated for much of the game. In addition to Andrews, Alan Shorting, a flanker in his first season of rugby, also had an oustanding game for Barbarians.

St. Michael's has declined to play in the British Columbia championships at Burnaby, May 3-5, but Barbarians will carry Vancouver Island hopes along with Victoria High Titans and Claremont Spartans.

In an earlier game, Esquimalt Dockers, coached by Keith Morrison, captured the Hodgkins (second division) Trophy by blanking Lambrick Park 24-0.

Tries accounted for all the points with Phil Field, Darryl Shephard, Greg Orton, Dave Ricciuti, Randy Falk and Mark Tebbutt each scoring one for Dockers, who led 12-0 at the half.

Hawks Connect First In Western Shootout

BRANDON (CP) — Winger Jim Dobsons second goal of the night snapped a 2-2 tie at the five-minute mark of the third period and Portland Winter Hawks went on to score a 4-2 victory over Brandon Wheat Kings in the opening game of the Western Hockey League championship Friday.

The second game of the best-of-seven series will be played here tonight. A win by the Wheat Kings would bring about a third game here Sunday. If the Winter Hawks win again tonight, the series resumes in Portland Monday.

Joel Elliott added the insurance marker with just over five minutes remaining. John Multan scored Portland's other goal as the Hawks bounced back from a 1-0 first-period deficit to take a 2-1 lead after two periods.

Defenceman Brad McCrimmon and Brian Propp scored for the Wheat Kings.

Bart Hunter made 36 saves in goal for the Winter Hawks, including several good stops when the Wheat Kings applied pressure following Dobson's tie-breaking goal. Brandon's Knickle turned aside 34 shots.

Referee Murray Harding of Winnipeg handed out 11 minor penalties in the hard-hitting game, six to the Wheat Kings.

Three Bruins Get Rest Before Tonight's Clash

MONTREAL (CP) — Boston Bruins gave three stalwarts the day off Friday when they practised for the second game tonight of a best-of-seven National Hockey League semi-final series against Montreal, while the Canadiens considered the possible loss of defenceman Brian Engblom.

Forwards Jean Ratelle and Don Marcotte, who scored the Boston goals in a 4-2 loss in the first game of the series here Thursday night, were excused from the practice at a suburban arena, along with defenceman Brad Park.

Meanwhile, the Canadiens went through their paces at yet another rink while the Forum prepared for a concert. Engblom, who suffered an injured leg in the series opener, skated for five minutes before retiring from the ice.

Forwards Mark Napier and Steve Shutt, both of whom missed making the Montreal lineup for the first game, were doubtful dressers for the game tonight, and left winger Steve Shutt, who also sat out the first game, was a question mark. Shutt suffered a charley horse against Toronto Maple Leafs in the quarter-final.

The Canadiens' continuing medical troubles made it all the more likely that centre Pierre Larouche, a roster fill-in who scored the winning goal in the first game, would be back in uniform for tonight's game, which will be televised over the national CBC network, starting at 5, PST.

"(Gerry) Cheevers is a goalie who likes to challenge the shooters," Larouche said of the Boston netminder. "He likes to give you a little opening to shoot at and then tries to tak it away. I was just faster than him, that's all."

Larouche broke a 2-2 tie in the 13th minute of the third period, directing a pass from Doug Risebrough past Cheevers to the goalie's left.

"They say we never get a break in Montreal," said the Bruins' Park. "We change our style, trying not to take penalties, but we still get bad calls from the officials,"

The visitors also wanted a penalty against Montreal defenceman Serge Savard for covering the puck on a Bruins scoring chance late in the game.

Boston coach Don Cherry, who has campaigned in the past about officiating in series against Montreal, put on a show behind the Boston bench, raising his arms to the crowd after what he suggested were bad calls by Newell, whether penalties against the Bruins or missed infractions by Montreal.

Montreal defenceman Guy Lapointe saw the Canadiens' long playoff history against the Bruins as a plus.

"It helps playing Boston because we've played them in the final the last two years," Lapointe said. "We know their style and we know what they'll probably do.

"They're a good forechecking hockey team. That's one of their strong points. We have a lot of respect for their power play. They've given us a lot of trouble in the past."

In the second game of the other semi-final today, New York Rangers, who won Thursday's opener by a 4-1 count, jumped into a 1-0 first-period lead on a goal by Walt Tzaczuk.

American, Cubans Earn Olympic Berths

HAVANA (Reuter) — The United States women's volleyball team qualified for the 1980 Olympics by defeating Canada in the sixth North American, Central American and Caribbean championship.

The Americans beat Canada 15-6, 15-2, 15-5 Friday for their fifth straight victory.

Cuba also was undefeated, while Canada had a 2-3 record. Mexico, the Dominican Republic, the Bahamas and Guatemala are the other teams.

In the men's division, Cuba won the right to represent the region in the Olympics when it defeated Guatemala 15-1, 15-0, 15-1. Canada had a 3-2 record in the men's group.

The first five teams in each division qualify for the Pan-American Games in Puerto Rico in July. Cuba, the U.S., Mexico, the Dominican Republic and Canada will represent the men. Canada, the U.S., Mexico and Cuba have qualified from the women's division.

Canadians Split

PYONGYANG, North Korea (CP) — The Canadian men's team defeated Luxembourg 5-2 and then lost by the same score to Bulgaria today in Swaythling Cup competition at the world table tennis championships.

In other men's matches, Hungary defeated Yugoslavia 5-3, China blanked West Germany 5-0, North Korea beat Poland 5-2, Finland downed Scotland 5-3 and Austria beat Italy 5-2.

In women's play, for the Corbillon Cup, Canada beat Indonesia 3-2 in a seventh-round match. The Canadians are in Group B.

Mariner Home Runs Do Slump-Ending Job

Times News Services

Pinch-hit home runs by Bob Stinson and Dan Meyer in the eighth inning capped a three-run Seattle rally in the Kingdome and gave the Mariners a 6-5 victory over New York Yankees and put an end to an 11-game American Baseball League losing streak.

Meyer delivered off Dick Tidrow, 1-1, after Willie Horton and Stinson also hit solo homers in the eighth.

The rally made a winner out of Mike Parrott, 1-0, who took over for Seattle starter Rick Honeycutt in the second inning after the Yankees scored all five of their runs.

Tidrow had replaced Yankee starter Ron Guidry in the seventh after Seattle placed runners on second and third with one out.

New York's Lou Piniella hit his first home run of the season two outs after Mickey Rivers opened the second with a double. Three pitches later, Reggie Jackson belted his fourth home run of the season.

Rivers singled in the fourth Yankee run and Willie Randolph's sacrifice fly added the fifth.

The Mariners' Julio Cruz delivered a two-run single in the third and Tom Paciorek socked his first home run of the season in the sixth. Meanwhile, Parrott held the Yankees at bay as he hurled 7 1-3 innings of shutout relief.

Last year wasn't Jerry Koosman's best season. This year just might be.

"I'm throwing the same now as I always have," the unbeaten Minnesota Twins' left-hander said after winning his fourth game this year, a 5-3 decision over Detroit Tigers. "It's just that these guys are giving me excellent support."

Which is what Koosman didn't get last year while pitching for New York Mets, a 3-15 season he'd like to forget. Seemingly washed up, Koosman was sent by New York to Minnesota in an off-season deal.

In other AL games, Baltimore Orioles trimmed Oakland A's 7-1, California Angels turned back Boston Red Sox 8-6, Kansas City Royals buried Cleveland Indians 15-7, Milwaukee Brewers defeated Toronto Blue Jays 8-5 and Chicago White Sox blasted Texas Rangers 11-0.

Nino Espinosa, traded by the New York Mets to Philadelpia Phillies before the season, allowed only four hits and pitched his first complete game of the year for his third victory in a 2-0 victory over the San Diego Padres.

In other NL games, Montreal Expos clubbed San Francisco Giants 14-8, Houston Astros outlasted Pittsburgh Pirates 9-8 in 11 innings, Atlanta Braves edged Chicago Cubs 3-2 and Cincinnati Red got by St. Louis Cardinals 4-3. Los Angeles at New York was rained out.

Sockers Defeat Whitecaps

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Peter Nover scored in the 30th minute Friday night, giving San Diego Sockers a 1-0 North American Soccer League victory over Vancouver Whitecaps before a crowd of 10,514 at San Diego Stadium.

San Diego goaltender Alan Mayer was credited with 10 saves, eight in the second half, while Vancouver keeper Phil Parkes was credited with three saves.

San Diego now has a 4-2 record while Vancouver is 3-2.

TIMES FIVEPIN ROLLOFFS ON SUNDAY

Webb, Andrew Top Qualifiers

Muriel Webb and Ron Andrew, after firing the highest scores in their fivepin divisions during the 16th annual Times Bowler-of-the-Week Contest, rate among the contenders to watch going into the Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs Sunday at Town and Country Lanes.

The rolloffs get underway at 1 p.m., Daylight Time.

Muriel topped the women who earned weekly awards by rolling a 257-316-367 — 940 series during the ninth week of competition and Ron finished at the top of the men's list of rolloff qualifiers with the 318-352-299 — 969 series he rolled during the third week.

Evie Weinberger rolled the second-highest women's series of 935 in the fifth week and Mike Tiffin was second among men with a 956 effort during the 11th week.

Bowlers qualified for the rolloffs in four divisions — men's and women's tenpins and men's and women's fivepins — by rolling the highest three-game scratch series during league play on southern Vancouver Island lanes.

Tenpinners will compete for rolloff titles at 1 p.m. May 6 at Mayfair Lanes.

The winner in each division of the rolloffs will receive a Times Trophy and any rolloff champion who is a daily subscriber to the Victoria Times will collect a bonus award of $150.

With the Times and the lanes sharing costs, no bowling fees will be charged.

Young Golfers Hustle

By rights, the greatest attention in Sunday's second-round matches of the CFAX-Vancouver Island Open match-play golf tournament should be directed at the championship competitors.

But it wouldn't hurt if a quick burst of attention was aimed at Neil O'Leary and Bruce Barlow, a pair of 15-year-olds from Colwood who are among the 16 survivors in the handicap division.

Not only the youngest, but probably the fastest.

"Absolutely without nerves," Hogarth says of Barlow and O'Leary. "But the thing you have to like about them is the way they move. They want to play all their games in 2½ hours.

"They're going to be refreshing players to watch . . . if you can keep up to them."

With the second round scheduled at Colwood, both will have home-course advantage Sunday. Barlow faces Bill Harrison, a Gorge Vale junior, while O'Leary plays Oak Bay's Mark Taylor.

Hogarth, meanwhile, will be one of the championship competitors in action. His rival also will be a junior — Glen Barlow, Bruce's 17-year-old brother. Glen fired the major upset last week by eliminating 1975 champion Grant Milliken.

In addition to Hogarth, four other pros survived the first round and all are matched against amateurs. Medallist Bob Beauchemin meets Keith Swetnam, Bruce Rands goes against Urban Allen, Bill Penny faces Graham McKay and John Morgan plays Greg Palmer of Nanaimo.

Something to come home from.

A job.

The secure feeling that you're meeting your responsiblities. Heating bills, food, warm clothes, shoes for school. All paid for. ☐ But too many British Columbians have nothing to come home from. ☐ They are unemployed. ☐ In quiet despair. With personal pride stripped away. (It's not just the tricycle she'd love to have. It's the winter coat she needs.) ☐ Under the Socreds in the last three years, an additional 27,000 individuals have been added to the unemployment list. ☐ More than 100,000 individuals in B.C. have nothing to come home from. ☐ And the Socreds themselves admit that, if re-elected, there will be even more in 1979*. ☐ Typists, labourers, teachers, carpenters, stenographers, editors, cooks, photographers, nurses, cab drivers, loggers, sailors, printers . . . ☐ The NDP created a total of 36,000 more jobs than the Socreds did. ☐ Because the NDP is concerned.

Job creation.
One more reason.

You're better off with the NDP

'Lost' Clubs Show Up To Help Jane Fire 68

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Jane Blalock didn't get her golf clubs until Thursday night.

"They came by air and got lost between Fort Lauderdale and Birmingham," she said. "They travelled all over the country."

With the help of an old putter "brought out of retirement," Blalock was able to score a four-under 68 on Friday and grab the first-round lead in the $100,000 Otey Crisman LPGA Classic.

Only four other golfers were able to match par or better.

Pat Bradley, the five-year pro from Arlington, Mass., held down second place with a two-under 70, and little-known M. J. Smith of Lower Hutt, New Zealand, was third with a 71.

Alice Miller, another stranger on the leader board, shared the fourth position with veteran Kathy Postlewait at par 72.

Defending titleholder Hollis Stacy had a bad day, finishing with 75.

Jocelyne Bourassa of Shawinigan, Que., was he top Canadian contender at 74. Sandra Post, formerly of Oakvile, Ont., had a 76 and Dale Shaw of Victoria carded a 77.

Hottest Hand Chilled

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The hottest hand in golf cooled off, and Tom Watson had to struggle to make the cut in the $250,000 Greater New Orleans Open.

The leading money-winner on the 1979 PGA tour with $229,966, Watson carded a 73 over the 7,080-yard Lakewood Country Club course Friday. His one-over-par score ended a streak of 14 straight rounds of making par or better.

"I'm disappointed that the streak ended," he said. "I guess I'll just have to start another one."

His two-round total of 144 was exactly at the cutoff point. He was tied with 23 others at the bottom of a field of 81 going into the third round.

It was the largest number to make the cut in a PGA tournament this year.

Lee Trevino, who re-engineered his putter before the New Orleans tournament opened, led the pack into the third round with a nine-under-par total of 135.

Bob Shearer, Calvin Peete and Jim Colbert were at 137.

Watson came into the tournament with two first-place finishes and two seconds in his previous four outings.

Trevino, who played the opening two rounds without a bogey, said he turned his game around by altering the blade of his putter.

Haas, Mayer Lead Legends

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Dick Mayer and Freddie Haas, Jr., first-time partners making their initial appearance in the Legends of Golf, combined for a seven-under-par 63 on Friday and took a two-shot lead after the first round of the 54-hole tournament.

Mayer, who won the 1957 U.S. Open by beating Cary Middlecoff in a playoff, teamed superbly with Haas, who was invited to the tournament Monday after Jim Ferrier withdrew because of an illness in his family.

Playing in his first tournament since 1970 and using a makeshift bag of clubs, Mayer birdied the first two holes with winding downhill putts and the early lead held despite a five-under-par 65 charge by the Hebert brothers — Jay and Lionel.

"I hadn't played a round of golf in two years until a month ago," said the 54-year-old Mayer.

Haas was en route to the New Orleans Open when he got a call from Legends' officials. The 63-year-old Haas, a member of the 1957 Ryder Cup team who ended Byron Nelson's winning streak of 11 consecutive tournaments at the Memphis Open in 1945, made four birdie putts, including a 40-foot snake on the 17th hole.

The Hebert brothers overcame bogeys on the third and fourth holes to make a run at the leaders with a four-under 31 on the back nine.

Defending champions Gardner Dickinson and Sam Snead carded a three-under-par 67.

Asked their chances against the elite field of greats 50 years and over, Haas laughed and said: "Zero."

Mayer was more optimistic, saying: "We have a chance. We aren't playing a bunch of 22-year-olds out there."

30 Arrested Off Hollywood Picket Line

INGLEWOOD (AP) — About 30 strikers were arrested Friday when some 500 angry pari-mutuel clerks at Hollywood Park Race Track set up a picket line and tried to keep customers from entering.

Some customers ran their cars through picket lines at two gates and five pickets were injured.

Police chief Jay Stroh said the 30 persons arrested were booked for investigation of blocking access to the park. Police used dogs in helping to quell the incident.

The clerks went on strike when the track installed new, semi-automated betting machines for the current meet, which began April 11.

It's Phoenix For Sonics

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Friday night was the first time Kansas City Kings had dominated Phoenix Suns on the offensive boards in their National Basketball Association Western Conference semi-final.

However, the Kings couldn't come up with the offense to match it, and succumbed to the Suns' excellent passing and finely-tuned running game, 120-99. The victory, paced by guard Paul Westphal's 32 points, allowed the Suns to capture the best-of-seven series 4-1.

Phoenix now will meet defending champion SuperSonics in Seattle Tuesday as they open their best-of-seven series for the conference crown.

Meanwhile, the Eastern Conference semi-finals continue Sunday with Atlanta Hawks visiting Washington Bullets for the seventh and deciding game of their series and Philadelphia entertaining San Antonio in a series in which the Spurs lead the '76ers 3-2.

Kansas City picked off 29 offensive rebounds but shot poorly. In the second quarter, for example, the Kings were able to hit only 18 per cent of their shots from the field (five of 28).

Trailing by 24 points, the Kings came on strong at the onset of the third period, outscoring the Suns 15-6 in the first 5½ minutes. But two fouls and a travelling call allowed the Suns to come up with three straight points and regain their momentum. They wound up the quarter with a 26-point lead and the Kings never threatened the rest of the way.

FORMER VICTORIAN HONORED

Eric Hughes, a native of Victoria who has coached gymnastics at the University of Washington for the past 28 years, has been honored as the 1979 recipient of the Honor Coach Award, the most presitgeous award bestowed by the (United States) National Association of Collegiate Gymnastics Coaches.

The award is presented annually to an outstanding coach with 25 years or more of exceptional service to gymnastics.

Hughes, 55, a graduate of Victoria High whose mother still resides in Victoria, introduced gymnastics as a club sport at Washington in 1950 and his teams compiled a 147-31-1, won-lost-tied record before he stepped down as coach this year. Under Hughes, Washington won three Pac 8 titles, two national AAU titles and was NCAA runner-up once.

He also coached a U.S. team that toured Russia, Czechoslovakia and Poland and was manager of the U.S. gym team in the 1972 Olympic Games at Munich.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological forecast for Sunday, April 29
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 19): Be selective, you have marvelous opportunity to "make your own luck." Family differences can be settled. Financial picture can be made brighter. Do it! You're practically handed something of value on proverbial silver platter.

TAURUS (Apr. 20-May 20): Accent on payments, collections, defining terms, streamlining techniques. Pises, Virgo persons figure prominently. One who makes outlandish claims — and charges — should no longer be humored. Draw the line!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Build on solid structure — accept responsibility, focus on priorities. Intitiate projects, be conspicuous by your presence. State needs; wear bright colors, be direct, independent. Exude confidence. Your "fortunate" number proves to be 8.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You reexamine "obligations." Light is shed on areas previously obscured by platitudes — and fears. Get rid of unnecessary burdens. Refuse to be possessed by possessions. Dream symbol could be meaningful.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Highlight originality — imprint your own style. Be "creatively selfish." Accent on personal desires, needs, actions necessary to fulfill commitments. Popularity increases, especially where opposite sex are concerned.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Emphasis on standing in community, honor, reputation, relations with professional associates superiors. You have rare opportunity of choosing direction of your destiny. Know it, elevate self-esteem and take cold plunge into future!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Accent on reaching more persons, sensing pulse of public. Define terms, check sources perfect techniques. Pisces, Virgo individuals figure prominently. What seems far away could be closer than is apparent upon cursory glance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Dig deep, find reasons for recent happenings — and costs. Be thorough, check sources, read between the lines. Partner or mate wants to talk money. Review contractual obligations. Taurus, Gemini, Aquarius persons figure prominently.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Study Scorpio message. Analyze motives, desires. You receive publicity connected with unique agreement. Do plenty of listening — gather and utilize signals, clues and vital information. Gain enlightment regarding legal rights, permissions.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Accent domestic area, life style, diplomacy, putting aside something for future security. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio persons figure in scenario. Family member talks about needs, emotional and financial.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Accent on speculation, creativity, intensified relationship. Change, variety, children, physical attractiveness also claim portions of spotlight. Pisces, Virgo figure prominently — and so does the number 7.

PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20): Past efforts pay dividends; views are vindicated. You are rewarded for faith in projects and people. Cancer, Capricorn individuals figure prominently. Gemini could help "get things started". Take protective measures in connection with home, property.

IF APRIL 29 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are a natural teacher, drawn to psychology, high-intuitive, sensitve, stubborn, determind, loyal and with an affinity for home and family. Cancer, Capricorn and Aquarius persons play important roles in your life. December could be one of your most memorable months of 1979, a year featuring intensified relationships, creative activities, including reading, writing, travel — and love. If married, you rediscover mate and there could be an addition to family. If single, there could be change in that lifestyle. You are a gourmet, you also appreciate art, jewelry and people who are "good" at relating anecdotes. Many are envious — others say t1ly can't survive without you. You have unique ability of knowing — in advance — when something of importance is to occur.

Monday, April 20

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Dreams can come true — with the help of letters, calls, demonstrations of humor, versatility. Relative who broods should not be encouraged to cry on your shoulder. You gain "rare insights." Make the most of information, intelligence.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Gather data, analyze situation, learn value of possessions, decide what is to be retained or discareded. Capricorn, Cancer persons figure in scenario. Older person is on your side — and proves it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Strive for greater appeal, for practical applications of apparent abstract concepts. Aries, Libra figure prominently — and so does the number 9. You can repay a favor and establish a valuable contact. Do it!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You gain access to a new proposal, to "secret" information. Display creative talents, independence, originality. Leo will aid. Your powers of persuasion could be at a peak. You receive news connected with home, hospital.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Accent on potential, distance, spiritual qualities and values. Scorpio, Aquarius figure prominently — and so does the number 4. You find affection, locate what was missing and you imprint style in meaningful manner.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Dig deep, make complete commitment, eschew halfway measures. Money is involved. Partner, mate give and receive accountings — "delicate" issues are ripe for discussions. Member of opposite sex opens your eyes to situation which is costly, unnecessary.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Accent on gaining public acceptance, creating structure based on harmonious home relationships. Money is a question, but can be favorably resolved. Middle man can be eliminated. An agreement will be concluded.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Diversify — utilize special abilities, refuse to be restricted by tradition or faint-hearted associates. Accent on basic interests, employment, recreation, health, dependents and willingness to stand tall for beliefs.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Nothing is tepid or halfway — it is all or nothing. Impulse takes command — fight to give logic "breathing room." Children, speculation, investments, quick changes all figure prominently. You are on brink of important discovery.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Seeds planted bear fruit — means past efforts pay dividends. You put finishing touches on project. You learn how to put across ideas, concepts. Older individual displays faith. You benefit from experience, track records. You make some compromises, but also merge victorious.

IF APRIL 30 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you exude a kind of warmth which is attractive, magnetic. You have a good sense of humor, a weight problem and a tendency to scatter your forces. You are artistic, fond of travel; you have ability to communicate, express and to enlighten others. You are a pioneer, willing to experiment with new techniques. You can aid others in times of trouble — you are better at helping strangers than those close to you. Sacrifice for loved ones and you do so without fanfare. You tend to be extravagant, generous with time and money. Gemini, Sagittarius persons play important roles in your life. September and November prove significant months for you in 1979, a year featuring change in life style, possible addition to family.

Easy Street for Oilers Against Listless Whalers

EDMONTON (CP) — Coach Don Blackburn wasn't pleased with his New England Whalers after Edmonton Oilers waltzed to a 9-5 World Hockey Association playoff victory Friday night.

"The Oilers probably have had tougher practices," Blackburn said after the Whalers came up with their second straight listless effort and fell behind 2-0 in the best-of-seven semi-final series.

It's been easy street so far for the Oilers, who are playing it tough against a Whaler club that has yet to show evidence of giving Edmonton some of its own medicine. Edmonton won the first game 6-2 Thursday night.

But Oilers coach Glen Sather expects some "tougher, harder games" when the series shifts to Springfield, Mass., for games three and four Sunday and Tuesday.

"They haven't backed away from us in New England," Sather said. "It won't be that easy there. They're going to play better."

The Whalers backed away Friday night and the Oilers were quick to grasp the opportunity before 13,349 fans. Edmonton scored twice within a span of eight seconds early in the first period and it was basically a romp from that point on. The Oilers fired 39 shots at the New England net and fashioned period leads of 4-2 and 6-3.

At Winnipeg, the Jets grabbed a 3-0 lead in the other semi-final and coach Tommy McVie attributed his team's 9-5 dumping of Quebec Nordiques to superior conditioning.

"What you saw out there tonight was the same hockey club that exploded out of the dressing room in Quebec," he said. "The reason was the stops and starts we've been doing for the last two months."

The Jets got three goals within 48 seconds in the third period — from Peter Sullivan, Roland Eriksson, and Morris Lukowich — to cement the win, and take a 3-0 lead in the semi-final. The Jets can wrap up the series at home Sunday.

The Jets' 24 goals thus far in the series breaks their own record of 20 goals in three consecutive playoff games set in a 1976 playoff against Houston.

Ligier Team Grabs Front Spots

MADRID (Reuter) — The French Ligier team topped Italy's Ferrari today to take the front places on the starting grid for Sunday's Spanish Formula One motor racing Grand Prix.

Jacques Laffite of France shattered the Jarama circuit lap record in the second official practices to take the pole position. Beside him on the grid will be compatriot and team-mate, Patrick Depailler.

Canadian Gilles Villeneuve, who was fastest with his Ferrari in practice Friday, could only snip four hundredths of a second off his time today and was relegated to the second line of the grid. Villeneuve, from Berthierville, Que., leads the over-all standings.

His South African team-mate, Jody Scheckter, spun off the track at the end of the long straight, emerged unscathed but could not improve on his best time.

Reigning world champion Mario Andretti of the United States took more than half a second off his best time Friday with the new Lotus-80 to move ahead of Scheckter on the starting line alongside Villeneuve.

His lap time was one minute 1:14.50 seconds compared with Depailler's 1:14.79 and Villeneuve's 1:24.83.

STYROFOAM*SM
THE LIFETIME INSULATION

It may look like STYROFOAM. It may feel like STYROFOAM. Some salesmen might even mistakenly refer to it as STYROFOAM. But if it doesn't have our brand name printed on it, it isn't STYROFOAM* SM brand insulation from Dow.

What's in a name anyway? Isn't one insulation pretty much like another? No way. The secret of STYROFOAM success over the past thirty years is its unique combination of insulating properties. It can't get wet and soggy. It won't mildew or rot. It won't crumble or break easily. STYROFOAM is lightweight yet strong. It's easy to use and retains for years its high insulation value of R-5 per inch of thickness in interior and even in exterior applications! It gives a lifetime of comfort and lower fuel bills.

Any product as good as STYROFOAM SM is bound to have imitators, which is why we suggest you be specific. Ask for STYROFOAM SM by name and make sure the brand name is printed on it.

IF IT DOESN'T SAY STYROFOAM*SM IT ISN'T.

STYROFOAM brand insulation is combustible and should be properly installed. A gypsum board interior finish should be used in residential construction. For specific instructions see Dow literature available from your supplier or from Dow.

A Way for Penny-Pinchers Touched with Wanderlust

EUROPE IN 19 DAYS...

By JOHN McPEEK

And his words were reassuring words to most of us standing in a small cluster alongside track No. 6 in Victoria Station waiting to board a train to Dover, for this was our first trip abroad and we still harbored faint fears that perhaps we would have been wiser to see Europe on our own.

"You've got two ways of seeing Europe," said Carl Dellman, "on your own, or have somebody hold your little hand and guide you every step of the way and at night tuck you into bed."

Dellman, a businessman from Halifax, Nova Scotia, was the traveler with the professed fondness for the "lazy man's way."

Good cheer seemed to be the prime force of Tour No. 3420. And why not? The air of expectancy was ever present. Like most guided tours, ours was fast-paced and every day brought new wonders.

It was a low-budget tour, one of about 50 "travel without tears" tours offered by Cosmos of London, a company that has long catered to the penny-pincher touched with wanderlust.

And Cosmos has a smorgasbord of journeys. It's tour packages range from as few as four days to as many as 29.

With all transportation, lodgings and most meals included in every tour, penny-wise gadabouts can sign on for as low as $169, four days in London and environs, to $846, 29 days in 10 countries. (The prices quoted here are in U.S. dollars and subject to change.)

Tour No. 3420, which started in London, as do all Cosmos tours, bounced through eight countries, 11 if you give full stature to Liechtenstein, Monaco and Vatican City.

In addition, there were Belgium, Holland, Germany, Switerzerland, Austria, Italy and France.

Prices seemed lowest in Italy. And contrary to recent reports, if one avoids fancier restaurants and major purchases, a visit to France need not be too costly.

The three days we spent in Paris hit us surprisingly easy in the pocketbook.

Mealtimes were very irregular because we were constantly on go. After visits to the city's major institutions, such as the Louvre, Notre Dame, the Eiffel Tower, the Arc de Triomphe and others, it was all free time.

And we made the most of it.

With the wonderful subway system, the Metro, you can grab a map at your hotel desk and zip to any place in the city in a matter of 15 minutes or so for the equivalent of about 20 cents — if you buy your tickets in packets of 10, available at all subway stops.

Because there is so much to see in this magnificent city of sweeping boulevards, broad parks, architectural splendors and eye-boggling statuary, your appetite is largely dictated by your stamina.

Fortunately, the tummy was seldom unhappy. Cosmos tours include almost all meals and if fish, breaded cutlets, or other camouflaged meats are your bag, you would be in glutton's heaven.

After all, Cosmos offers only budget tour meals, with the exception of the continental breakfasts, were three-course affairs, starting with soup (in Italy pasta usually was substituted) and ending with dessert.

In Amsterdam we toured a diamond factory. The visit ended in a showroom featuring "factory prices." In Venice we visited a glass factory. Another showroom. In Florence we visited a leather factory. In Southern France we visited a perfume factory. In Arbois, France, we visited a winery. The wonders of Europe were everywhere and the sights we saw each day were overwhelming.

Castles, catherdrals, palaces, museums. You read about them all your life — their magnificence, their opulence, their beauty. Yet when you see them your mouth hangs open.

They stir conflicting emotions — pride that humans such as yourself created them and a bit of envy that you were not blessed with even a smidgen of the greatness of those who bequeathed us such spectacularly enduring monuments.

Oh well, smile and accept your insignificence. Take delight in being able to also enjoy less-sung-about attractions, such as:

● The cat barge berthed in Amsterdam's central canal. Maintained by the city, it's home to some 150 unwanted felines. Most of the fat little devils look as though they would claw anyone who attempted to adopt them and take them away from their aquatic hostelry.

● An optical illusion called Switzerland. Forget it. There's no such place. it has to be done with mirrors. No place could be that beautiful.

● For the ultimate in incongruity, pause beside the Circus Maximus in Rome and watch occasional joggers work their way around the track where a couple of thousand years ago Ben Hur was doing wheelies in his chariot.

● Seek out the little-known Church of Santa Croce in Florence. Forget its Gothic beauty. Let your mind dwell on the magnitude of the brillance of the geniuses who are entombed there: Michelango, Galileo, Machiavelli, plus lesser lights, all in one church. Unbelievable!

● An itsy-bitsy place called Liechtenstein. It's a probably got the patent on charm. Stay away if you don't want your faith shaken in the belief that wealth, power and size are the prime ingredients for making of a "great" nation.

● the same sorcerers who created the magical Switerzerland must have taken their training in Austria. It's a rhapsodic symphony of nature's beauty in which majestic peaks serve as perfect counterpoint to the soft pastel charm of manicured valleys.

● The joy of leg-pulling in London. The bemused look of the bobby on duty at the door of No. 10 Downing St. when in response to your query he tells you that the prime minister is not in. "Oh well, I'll catch him next time I'm in town." And the bobby comes right back with: "Shall I tell him who was calling?"

● Surprisingly, many enjoyable moments came on the tour bus itself as we rolled across the continent. Seldom did we drive more than two hours without a rest stop, consequently there was little travel fatigue and the good-humor level stayed high, constantly fed by new sights and the lushness of the European countryside.

First World Wine Fair in Bristol

A very large quantity of wine will be consumed in Bristol this summer. This city, 118 miles west of London, has centuries-old links with the wine trade, and so it is an appropriate setting for the first World Wine Fair and Festival (July 19-30) which is to become an annual event. It takes place in the exhibition centre beside the docks right in the heart of the city: more than 1,000 different wines from nearly 30 countries will be available for sampling.

Even without the wine, Bristol is a place which has a great deal to interest the visitor at any time. It has the oldest working theatre in Britain; the first ocean-going iron ship, and a church described by Elizabeth I as "the fairest, the goodliest, and most famous parish church in England."

The wine fair and festival will include films, a carnival procession (July 29), military band spectaculars (July 25 and 29), a small boats regatta (July 22), orchestral concerts, a fireworks display, folk dancing, jazz, and, within the wine fair itself, daily cookery demonstrations, wine tastings and international cabaret.

On the first two days, the fair will be open to trade customers only, and on most other days the mornings will be confined to trade visitors, and the afternoons and evenings to the public. The $5 admission price gives the visitor 10 wine-tasting vouchers.

Bristol, now only 90 minutes by rail from London, and also served by the M4 motorway, has a long history — in 1973, it celebrated the 600th aniversary of being granted county status by King Edward III. As well as its wine imports, Bristol in the 17th and 18th centuries was especially noted for its trade with the Americas.

The city's best-known ship is the S.S. Great Britain, which stands proudly in the dock — not far from the wine venue — from which she was launched on 19 July, 1843. This 3,000-ton vessel, the first ocean-going iron propeller-driven ship in history, was the creation of the brilliant Victorian engineer, Isambard Kingdom Brunel. Towed 7,500 miles back from the Falkland Islands in 1970, she is gradually being restored to her former glories, and is open to the public.

Brunel was also responsible for Bristol's Temple Meads Station, and for the dramatic Clifton Suspension Bridge across the Avon Gorge, soaring 245 feet above high water.

Bristol has a noble cathedral not far from the exhibition centre, but the church which Elizabeth I so admired is the 14th century St. Mary Redcliffe, with its lofty and elegant spire, elaborate vaulting and a wealth of monuments and brasses.

A few 100 yards away, at Prince's Wharf, is the city's latest attraction, the Bristol Industrial Museum, opened this year. With plenty of room for expansion in this old dockside warehouse, it contains a wide range of exhibits illustrating many aspects of the city's trade, industry and transport. Model boats, ancient fire-engines, pin-making machines, beam scales for weighing tobacco in 'hogshead' barrels . . . the museum also has items dealing with modern Bristol, including a big model of Concorde, and a complete 1959 Bristol Sycamore — the first successful all-British helicopter design.

You are never far from water, even when drinking wine, in Bristol, and visitors can take some interesting trips around the city's waterways. These range from evening tours of dockside pubs to weekend six-hour cruises to, or from, the handsome neighbouring Georgian city of Bath.

New Territories, the Often Ignored Side of Hong Kong

By MIKE CARLTON

LAU FAU SHAN, New Territories — EEK! my companion screamed as a shrimp came hurtling out of a metal tank and made a graceless landing on the toe of her boot. Transfixed with fear, she watched the multiple legs and whipping tail of the shrimp propel its body over her Gucci leather and into a puddle of foul-smelling water.

Welcome to the New Territories, love.

Only a few miles — but centuries in time — away from Hong Kong, the New Territories is just now being discovered by tourists. And Lau Fau Shan, happily, has been found by practically none. It's one of those little discoveries a traveler likes to make. The kind of place he can cherish as his own — cherish, that is, if you don't mind an occasional shrimp climbing over your body.

Lau Fau Shan is a fish market town. Famous for its oysters, the village sits across a misty bay from Mainland China and fishermen from the communist country sail daily to Lau Fau Shan to sell fish to their capitalist brothers on the other side. All very unofficially, of course.

Walking down the narrow, sloping path to the sea from the main square of Lau Fau Shan is like entering another world. Colorful awnings keep out the sun as you plunge into a darkness filled with shouts, bells ringing (a sale has been made), splashing water, jumping shrimp, crawling lobsters, swimming groupers, smiling market owners, frowning fishermen, and a mixture of smells only Dante could have imagined.

This is the real China, the type of village the British left far behind when they developed the skyscraper-dominated city of Hong Kong. The kind of place you will find only here, in the New Territories, the often-ignored side of Hong Kong.

Hong Kong island and Kowloon, which are only 34.5 square miles in area, contain nearly half of the 4.7 million population of Hong Kong. The rest live in the New Territories with its 370 square miles and 235 islands, most of which are uninhabited.

Although much of the New Territories has been settled, the majority of its people live in three satellite towns, which leaves the rest of it relatively rural: home to duck farms, and fish frms, and rice paddies and villages like Lau Fau Shan.

Much of the New Territories is also national park land, including the beautiful Bridge's Pool, tucked away in the northeastern reaches of the green, rural countryside.

The New Territories, unlike Hong Kong island, is not a British colony, but rather is a territory under British administration. The laws are different, it is not regarded as crown land, and even the people are different — less likely to speak English, sensitive to being photographed, quick to laugh, quick to anger, and not as used to having tourists pounding their way past gardens and homes.

The New Territories has much to recommend it to tourists weary of the hustle and hassle of Hong Kong.

It has open territory; lovely green parks; two exciting market centers, Aai Po and Yuen Long; and enough villages like Lau Fau Shan to make every bend in the road a discovery. It also has the Royal Golf Club in Fan Ling (visitors can play Monday through Friday only); a new space-age horse-racing track in Shantin (which is also famous for its roast pigeon and 10,000 Buddha temple); the Tai Ping Carpet Factory where you can tour in the afternoon and watch some of the world's most beautiful carpets being crafted; and a couple of lookouts from which you can see the People's Republic of China. It is also home to the Haaka people with their huge black-fringed hats and regal manner.

On the islands of the New Territories, you will find even more variety. Cheung Chau, for example, is full of temples, including the Pak Tai Temple, which holds an iron sword dating back to the Sung Dynasty in 960 AD, and a gold crown made in honor of the visit of Princess Margaret in 1966.

The outlying island of Lantau is twice the size of Hong Kong island and has nearly as many attractions as the bustling city. Here you can visit the fishing village of Tai O, its houses resting on stilts; the Po Lin Monastery, high in the Lantau hills; the Trappist Monastery; Silvermine Bay with its sealed, old mines; a 200-year-old fort; and Butterfly Hill, so named because of the butterflies that abound in the summer months. The islands are easily reached by ferry service.

Most sections of the New Territories are best seen on your own, although there are organized motorcoach tours to the main areas. One of the best ways to visit the New Territories is to take the Kowloon-Canton railroad. There are eight stops between Kowloon and the Chinese border, nearly all of which offer something of interest. The entire trip from one end of the line to the other takes less than an hour and one-half and costs only 50 cents.

Or, you can take the bus, a cultural shock in itself. To reach Lau Fau Shan, for example, take a No. 50 bus from Kowloon to Yuen Long and then transfer to a No. 55 to the village. It takes a bit of schedule juggling, but it's worth the trip. You can also rent a car and driver.

Finally, if you are particularly adventuresome, rent a car and drive yourself through the New Territories. I say for the adventursome, because Chinese drivers are wild, the roads narrow and the highway signs sometimes a bit confusing. But the freedom is worth the bother and you'll be able to stop at every duck farm, every fish pond, and every tiny village that appeals to you.

And do find the time to visit Lau Fau Shan. It offers a feast for all the scenes. Even if you aren't up to eating dried snake, or 100-year-old eggs, you can still go over to a tank and pick out the shrimp or lobster or grouper you want for lunch, have it put into a plastic bag, carry it to the Siu Tao Yuen restaurant and have the chef prepare it for your lunch. It's a wonderfully exciting, exotic experience worthy of any traveler's time.

For more information ask the Hong Tourist Association (160 Sansome Street, No. 1102, San Francisco 94104) for its free pamphlet "See for Yourself," which has a good selection of suggested New Territories tours.

The Ritz, an Old Lady Of Paris Luxury Hotels

By JOY GERVILLE-REACHE

PARIS—The Ritz—the grand old lady of Paris luxury hotels—is often filled right up to its maids' rooms, inflation and the decline of the dollar notwithstanding.

More than half its clients are North Americans — tourists, businessmen and those who always have stayed at the Ritz.

It sounds incongruous when a receptionist at this most elegant of hotels tells a caller, "I greatly regret . . . even our maids' rooms are taken."

A client however well known may have to content himself with one of these rooms if he is late in making a reservation.

In the old days these attic rooms on the fourth floor were literally servants' rooms — reserved for the valets and maids accompanying the hotel's wealthy guests.

It is rare for a client to bring along a personal servant these days. But the maids' rooms, with their rooftop view, are available for renting to anyone who asks for them, and some regular clients do so. The price is from $36 (U.S.) a night up, including service and taxes. But these rooms do not have private baths and the elevator stops at the third floor meaning a climb up the last flight of stairs. (All prices in this article are quoted in U.S. currency).

You would pay that price for a single room with bath or shower in the average three-star Paris hotel, and most likely it would include breakfast. A continental breakfast at the Ritz (room service is available in the maids' rooms) is an additional $6.50. It comes with croissants and brioches made in the hotel's own bakery.

The Ritz mangement is considering converting the attic rooms into larger rooms complete with bath and then of course the price will go up — way up.

A regular single room at the Ritz costs from $100 a night up; a double room from $136. Suites are from $190 for a single person to $225 for two people. The fixed-price luncheon or dinner menu in the hotel restaurants is $27.

The Ritz, however, in cooperation with Air France, has entered the tourist market with a bargain-price package deal, known as the Paris Aristocrat. This includes round-trip economy fare from New York, six nights at the Ritz with continental breakfast and one gourmet luncheon or dinner, a boat trip on the Seine and private car service to and from Charles de Gaulle Airport. The price: double occupancy from $659 up, single from $840 up. Departures are on specified dates from November through April (the Christmas-New Year period excluded).

Americans opting for this six-day luxury stay in Paris include many Texans, for Air France has a nonstop flight four times a week from Houston to Paris. In cooperation with Braniff, Air France is hoping to start a Concorde service between Dallas and Paris early in 1979.

Michele de la Clergerie, the Ritz's bilingual spokeswoman (Scottish father, French-Belgian mother, French husband) can't explain why business is so good this year in what normally would be the hotel's off season. "There's no reason for it," she says with a baffled air.

While many of the Ritz's clients today are business people and tourists, the elite of Europe, including royalty traveling incognito, still stay there.

"These are guests who come here because they don't want to be seen — or to see," Mrs. de la Clergerie says.

Normally the square, in spite of its central position between the Place de l'Opera and the Tuileries Gardens, is a relatively quiet oasis, and it is easy for those who want it that way to come and go from the hotel unseen.

There's an air of sedate dignity about the Place Vendome, stemming from three centuries of history. The buildings on both sides of the square, which form a marvel of symmetry, were designed by Louis XIV's architect, Jules Hardouin - Mansart, and were completed early in the 18th century. The great column in the center commemorates Napoleon's victory over the Austria and Russian armies at Austerlitz in 1805.

Originally most of the buildings were privately owned and the Ritz occupies the former residence of the Duc de Lauzun.

Cesar Ritz, who founded the hotel 80 years ago, began life as a shepherd boy in Switzerland. He came to Paris to work as a waiter and later formed a partnership with the great French chef, Escoffier, who took over the kitchens when the hotel opened.

When Cesar Ritz died, his son Charles took over, and now the hotel is directed by Charles' widow. In recent years Mrs. Ritz has supervised its complete redecoration and renovation.

The Ritz is really two hotels in one. A second building with an entrance on the Rue Cambon is linked to the Place Vendome by a long, narrow gallery lined with 120 showcases displaying luxury goods. Those guests who "don't want to be seen" can do their shopping right on the spot.

There are three gardens within the hotel boundaries, all unseen from the street. In the summer restaurant meals are served outside.

The Ritz prides itself on the personal service it gives its clients, and its staff of more than 400 outnumbers the guests by 2-to-1.

Union Invites All Candidates

The Telecommunications Workers Union will be holding a meeting for all federal and provincial election candidates in the area at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the Union Centre on Quadra Street.

The meeting is one of four planned for various parts of the province to focus on labor issues in both campaigns.

"It is high time the voters hear what the candidates in both elections have to say about issues important to the labor movement," TWU president Bob Donnelly said Friday.

He said increases in taxes, increased inflation and unfair wage controls have produced a terrible economic situation for workers in 1979.

"For many groups of workers, real income has in fact declined in the last year while profits of corporations like B.C. Tel, MacMillan Bloedel and the multi-national corporations have been exceptionally high."

Canada's current problems are problems for working people not for the corporations, Donnelly added.

"The members of our union want to know where the candidates of all parties stand on these issues.

"We want to know who will fight for our members when it comes to issues like right-to-work legislation, wage controls, Canada's permanently high unemployment rate, taxation laws and the protection of union rights.

Paving Sunday

Clear, sunny weather may be great beach weather but it's also ideal for road paving and city engineers plan to take good advantage of it this weekend.

Two main arteries will be under partial closure in the city Sunday while paving crews go to work.

Broad Street will be shut from Yates to Johnson and Johnson will be closed from Government to Douglas.

The closures will be in effect from 5 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Alaska Hwy. Oil Pipe 'Vital' to Vancouver I.

A proposal to build an oil pipeline along the Alaska Highway is of vital importance to southern Vancouver Island because it could remove "the greatest single threat to our marine environment," David Anderson said today.

Anderson, Liberal candidate in the federal riding of Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands, said the pipeline proposal could eliminate the fear of a catastrophic oil spill from supertankers bringing Alaskan oil through the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

He said the proposal by Foothills Pipeline Ltd., Westcoast Transmission Ltd. and an American partner would involve a pipeline from Skagway, Alaska, heading along the Whitepass & Yukon Railway right-of-way to run parallel to the proposed $5 billion natural gas line along the Alaska Highway.

Via the Northwest Territories it would extend to Keg River, Alta., where the existing oil distribution system would move the Alaskan oil southward.

"If they do use this route from Skagway the near-certainty of developing Port Angeles as the largest superport for tankers on the West Coast of North America will disappear," Anderson predicted.

"It would remove from the Strait of Juan de Fuca the greatest single threat to our marine environment we have ever been faced with."

If the Port Angeles superport is established, he said, it would increase six-fold the amount of Alaskan oil coming through the strait — already estimated at 350,000 barrels a day.

Anderson said computer predictions show that if a major oil spill occurred at Cape Flattery during the month of September the oil would smear every cove and inlet from Nitinat on Vancouver Island's famed West Coast Trail to Race Rocks.

Blencoe Irked On Library Ads

When newspaper advertisements appeared earlier this month offering the library building at Yates and Blanshard for sale Victoria aldermen expressed shock that they hadn't been consulted on the matter.

But at Thursday's council meeting Ald. Robin Blencoe seemed to be the only member of council still upset over the issue.

Blencoe took a run a Mayor Mike Young and city manager Jim Bramley, saying that the ads should never have been placed without council's approval.

Bramley replied that city staff had placed the ads because he wanted to be able to provide council with some figures when it came time to debate the building's future.

"All the options are still open," he said. "As far as I'm concerned there's been no harm done."

Young agreed that the ads had in no way prejudiced debate on the Carnegie building.

The mayor also said that although he'd known in advance that the ads were to be run he hadn't ordered them, as Blencoe charged.

"I simply took the recommendation of staff about how the ads should be placed.

"If you see this as grievously affecting the democratic principle, then so be it."

Blencoe replied that that was exactly how he saw it and said the ads had shocked a number of aldermen.

Five council members contacted by the Times when the ads first appeared had all expressed surprise. Most had said they wanted some explanation for the move.

But no other aldermen rose to support Blencoe Thursday.

The Carnegie building is to be vacated in the near future when the library moves to new quarters.

No Extra FM Ads

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission says there's no plan to allow FM radio stations to air more commercials in prime time.

Pierre Camu, CRTC chairman, said in a statement Friday to clarify earlier news reports.

Camu says proposed amendments to FM regulations will allow radio stations more flexibility to distribute their commercials throughout the day. However he says the change will not result in more commercial air time, either at peak hours or at any other time of the day.

The present limit of no more than 10 minutes in commercials an hour remains in force.

Toronto Symphony Visits

DAVIS

LOMAN
. . . harp soloist

Canada's most prestigious orchestra, the Toronto Symphony, in the course of its first tour of western Canada and the United States comes to Victoria Tuesday.

Under the auspices of the Victoria Symphony Society, with music director Andrew Davis on the podium, it will present a single concert at University Centre Auditorium, starting at 8 p.m. Now in its 57th season, the Toronto Symphony is the only full orchestra in this country which has achieved international recognition through tours in Europe and the Orient. The latter includes the recent historic tour of the People's Republic of China.

The TSO's reputation has grown through the years under the leadership of such outstanding artists as Seiji Ozawa, Karel Ancerl, Sir Ernest MacMillan and, since 1975, Maestro Davis.

During the 1978-79 season, the orchestra performed 84 subscription concerts to 27,000 subscribers at Massey Hall, and in the summer of '78, 18 concerts at the Forum of Ontario Place to a total audience in excess of 83,000.

Davis, 35, has experienced a relatively brief but intense career. His conducting talent emerged when he was an organ scholar at King's College, Cambridge, and subsequently he studied with Maestro Franco Ferrara in Rome, worked extensively as a keyboard player with the Academy of St.Martin-in-the-Fields, was for two years with the BBC Scottish Symphony, and appointed associate conductor of the New Philharmonia Orchestra.

This season, in addition to his duties with the Toronto Symphony, he has guest-conducted in London, Los Angeles, Boston, Cleveland, with Rome's Santa Caecilia Orchestra, and made his debut with both the Berlin Philharmonic and Stockholm Philharmonic. Last year he was awarded two Grand Prix du Disque awards for his recording of Maurice Durufle's Requiem with the London Philharmonic.

Guest soloist for the concert will be the noted harpist Judy Loman. She will perform Handel's Concerto for Harp No.6 Op.4 in B flat major. The program will also include Mouvement Symphonique No.2 by Matton and Symphony No.10 Op.93 by Shostakovich.

ELLI BOISVERT . . . sings at Market Square Sunday

Devotion to French Music

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Vancouver-born Elli Boisvert is a convert to a cultural tradition that is not hers by right of inheritance. Even her name is an adopted one.

She gives the impression she does not even want to mention her original name; that she wishes to submerge her former identity entirely beneath her chosen one.

Having an urge to sing and a natural attraction toward the folk culture of French Canada, she headed for La Belle Provence soon after leaving school and spent two years there from 1975 to 1977, living in Quebec City, where she picked up the knack of singing French-Canadian songs.

Back on the west coast and living in Victoria, Elli has teamed up with Kelly Hurley, who lived in Quebec for four years as a child and plays piano and accordion, and Michel Dumont, composer and folk artist who plays guitar and sings with her. There is also Sue Thorne, a flutist with a special liking for Celtic music, echoes of which can be heard in much French folk music.

This quartet, which has been drawn together by the mutuality of its musical focus, is to make its first public appearance performing in Market Square Sunday at 1:30 p.m. The program will consist of both traditional and contemporary songs with a couple of numbers specially meant for children in the audience.

Also, providing an important contrast on the program will be Les Cornouillers (it means dogwood), a group of young French-Canadian dancers. Not all are Quebecois, In fact two of the principal dancers possess the emphatically Brit-Scots names of Richard Stevens and Carl McLean. Both however boast partial French parentage.

The dances they do are a mixture of French and Irish. Some they have created themselves on basic steps — mostly taking the form of jigs, they tell you. Their costumes consist of red plaid shirts for the men and country-style red dresses on the girls. The music they dance to is amplified from cassettes.

Les Cornouillers is the group that won the last B.C. folk dance festival, topping 10 groups from all parts of the province. They also danced at the Commonwealth Games in Edmonton. Their schedule, in fact, is an extremely busy one, considering that they are not professionally engaged in dancing.

They are to make a 10-minute CBC television appearance in Kamloops this weekend as part of Radio-Canada's French Canada Day. On May 26 they will be dancing at a World Association meeting at the University of B.C.; in June at the Francofest celebrating St.John the Baptist Day in Coquitlam; in Richmond for the Congress of French Associations in B.C., and later on at Batoche, Sask., when the western provinces commemorate the Louis Riel centenary.

"We feel that the French music is the common denominator that has brought us all together and will help us communicate with our audience," says Elli. "We hope the audience will feel it so much that they'll join in with singing and clapping."

A company of stars — the creme-de-la-creme of Canadian classical ballet dancers — that is what has been created in Ballet Revue. It's a gifted, technically brilliant group of National Ballet principals including, left to right, Tomas Schramek, Cynthia Lucas, David Roxander, Karen Kain, Frank Augustyn and Anne Ditchburn. This elite company will be giving four performances in Victoria at the McPherson Playhouse: two on Mothers' Day, May 13, at 2 p.m. and 8 p.m., and two more on May 14 and 15 at 8 p.m. The programs will offer original works such as Ditchburn's own much praised creations, Nelligan and Infanticide of Marie Farrar, and excerpts from the virtuoso classical repertoire, such as Don Quixote, Sleeping Beauty, Swan Lake, Le Corsaire and others.

AROUND THE ART GALLERIES

Painter Ardath Davis of Victoria, who has become internationally noted for the sensitivity and fine execution of her watercolor work, has just achieved another distinction. She has had a watercolor painting accepted to be hung in the open juried exhibition for non-members in the famous Salmagundi Club on New York's 5th Avenue. The Salmagundi is America's oldest professional art club, and this is only the second time in 109 years that the Salmagundi has held a non-members open exhibition.

Works of art submitted for the exhibition, which opens Monday and will run through May 25, came from every state in the U.S. Paintings, drawings, graphics and sculpture are included in the show and to be one of the chosen is a rare honor.

In Victoria, at the Leafhill Galleries, 47 Bastion Square, Davis' work will be seen in a one-woman show from Friday through May 12. An associate member of the American Watercolor Society, and the first Canadian woman to become a member of the Northwest Watercolor Society of Seattle, she has shown in the Catherine Lorillard Wolfe Club, New York. Her works are also in public and private collections in Canada, England, Ireland and the United States.

At the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria there will be presented, from Wednesday through June 3, a unique exhibition of portraits by Victoria photographer Nina Raginsky. It is a touring exhibition circulated and organized by the Still Photography Division of the National Film Board and clearly reveals why Miss Raginsky is rapidly becoming famous for her photographs.

Critic Geoffrey James, writing in ArtsCanada in 1978, commented: "The sharp, funny, antic photographs of Nina Raginsky look deceptively easy and offhand. In fact Raginsky has pulled off the difficult feat of producing sharply-drawn caricatures that seem to be entirely without malice ..."

An exhibition and workshops of creative arts on the theme of "Children and Peace", celebrating the International Year of the Child, will take place at Open Space Gallery, 510 Fort, Tuesday through Friday.

Hosted by the Victoria I.Y.C. Youth Committee, the event is an additional feature of the Victoria International Performing Arts Festival for Young People. Children and adults are invited to express themselves in arts and crafts, including painting, wool crafts, clay modelling, felt-pen art, origami, cardboard sculpture, collages, rock painting.

There will also be a book corner, story telling and films. Sessions will take place from 9 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. daily.

A donation of a mezzo-tint by an English painter and illustrator, the late Stella Langdale, will be added to the Langdale prints included in the original Maltwood bequest which is now housed at University of Victoria's Maltwood Art Museum and Gallery. The donation comes from Mrs. G. MacDonald of Victoria. It is entitled Shoreham Harbour, and is one of 10 pieces donated by Mrs. MacDonald.

A Canada Council award of an $8,400 grant is also announced by the Maltwood Gallery. It is made to compile a catalogue for the B.C. Colonial Painters exhibition which takes place in June. The catalogue will be written by Helen Peters, a former graduate student of UVic's history in art department.

There has been a recent purchase for the gallery of an E.J. Hughes sketch entitled Cowichan Bay. This is an annotated pencil sketch with notes of color and shading. The acquisition represents a new direction for the gallery.

"The sketch is in the academic tradition where landscape painting is done from a series of pencil studies," says Martin Segger, curator of the gallery.

"We want to expand the collection to include works of art within a series of various production stages. We are trying to build a study collection which will be of particular use to students. This is the educational function of a university gallery," Segger says.

* * *

From Monday through May 11 the Emily Carr Arts Centre, 207 Government, will have a showing of the work of David Derouin. Included will be realism, with acrylics, still-life, prairie landscapes, car portraits and mountain scenes.

A series of art workshops for children and young people is now in progress at the centre. Pre-school children have an hour's session on Tuesdays from 10:30 a.m. and on Wednesdays from 2 p.m. Mothers are welcome and all materials are supplied. Children from five to 12 years have Saturday sessions from 10:30 a.m. to 12 noon with materials supplied.

Young teenagers are given an opportunity to develop drawing skills in a variety of media, both at the centre and at other locations within walking distance. Students for these sessions are requested to bring minimum supplies and a portable drawing board. These classes will continue from their starting date last Saturday for eight weeks.

'Not Glitzy At All'

TORONTO (CP) — There are two Linda Thorsons.

The first and most celebrated is Britain's favorite Canadian bubblehead.

"I hardly move without the press," says this Linda. It's not an exaggeration. Ever since she replaced Diana Rigg in The Avengers a decade ago, she's been fair game.

In a country where reserve is the norm, Linda Thorson has been vulnerably outspoken on men, love and marriage.

Her name has, as a result, been waved like a red flag at any hint of a scandal. She has twice been implicated in divorces other than her own.

"I've been named once," she corrects. That concerned her five-year liaison with Laurie Marsh, a British property tycoon. "And I was misnamed once."

But then a second Linda Thorson emerges.

"I'm not screaming for someone to say 'serious per[illegible] quotes, but the strange thing is that I'm not glitzy at all.

"I'm not in the social scene. I've done a little TV and a few pictures and I've spent 10 years breaking my back in the English provinces. It just doesn't go with all the other things."

In the last year, Linda Thorson at 31 in finding herself accepted as something more than a racy headline, a turnabout she owes partially to Toronto.

Thorson has just finished appearing in Artichoke, a Canadian play that has been doing a lot of travelling, in Houston, Tex. This summer she will play Violain Twelfth Night at London's open-air theatre in Regent's Park.

Cathedral Sound Defeats Choir

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Among the organizations that have now concluded or are in the process of concluding regular seasons for 1978-79 is Amity Singers, Victoria's notably successful chamber ensemble.

Amity is one of those musical aggregates that, while characterized as semi-professional, sustains excellent professional standards. To such a degree in fact that Canada Council recognizes the choir as one of Canada's best and reflects this viewpoint in maximum annual grants.

Recently Amity was heard in its final concert, bringing together under the baton of Jon Washburn a few of the finest resident professional musicians together with guest soloist, soprano Ingrid Suderman.

The setting was Christ Church Cathedral and the music beautifully chosen with some reflection of the just-past Easter celebration. Programmed was The King Shall Rejoice, Handel's second coronation anthem for George III; Mozart's Vesperae Solennes de Confessore, and J.S. Bach's Cantata No.140.

The chamber orchestra led by Sydney Humphreys was superb. It contained outstanding orchestral soloists in the Bach work, particularly violinist Humphreys and oboist Bill Benjamin.

The most serious problem the performance presented lay with the cathedral acoustics, with which Washburn seemed not to have attempted to cope. As a consequence, good as it was, the orchestra decidedly overbalanced the small chorus. Contributing to the often blurred effect were unclear cues from the conductor. Under these circumstances it became difficult to assess the quality of the choral part of the performance.

Ingrid Suderman's usually limpid soprano sounded somewhat strained in the Mozart Vesperae. It seemed likely that the rather slow tempo taken by Washburn contributed to this. She is, nevertheless, without doubt an exceptional artist. Her phrases flow beautifully, there are exquisite nuances in her tonal coloring and she provides an intelligent and sensitive handling of the text.

One of the delights of the evening that must be noted was the performance of Amity's own alto solist in the Mozart. Nancy Holmes is a youthful singer of enormous promise. The tonal quality has a satiny texture, production is already wonderfully smooth and uniform and there are implications of the power that will develop as the vocal instrument matures. With all this, the young artist is deeply empathetic with her material, singing with warmth and genuine emotion.

Musical Notebook: Record Cut at UVic

The first album to be recorded in the University Centre auditorium at UVic is now available in local music stores.

The recording, made for Crystal Records of Los Angeles last September, features UVic professor and clarinetist Ethan Sloane, pianist Paul Posnak, professor at Mannes College of Music in New York, and Alan Iglitzin, violist with the Philadelphia String Quartet and artist-in-residence at the University of Washington.

The three musicians perform eight romantic pieces, Opus 73, by Max Bruch. This music had never before been recorded in its entirety.

The recording session was sponsored by a UVic grant and the taping was done under the supervision of Victoria recording engineer Herbert Schaefer.

Sloane is a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music and of Yale, where he is completing his doctorate. Posnak studied at Juilliard and performed with the Philadelphia Quartet at Victoria International Festival last summer, where he and Sloane first met.

The Conservatory Concert Wind Band under the direction of Laurence de la Haye will be presented in concert by the Victoria Conservatory of Music Sunday at 1 p.m. The program will feature works by Holst, Giovannini, Haydn and Gounod.

This concert will no sooner be over that de la Haye will hurry off to the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, where he will assume his place with the Ars Nova Ensemble which is presenting a chamber music concert at 3 p.m.

Performing music by Hugo Cole, Art Lewis, Beethoven and Benda will be clarinetist de la Haye; James Kennedy, flute and tenor recorder; Vicki Kereluk, violin, and Mary Ducker, piano.

Music Festival Shifts Gears For More Hectic Week

With the first week behind them, Victoria Music Festival staff and adjudicators have the weekend to regroup themselves for the second and more hectic week that opens Monday.

The two sections are spanned by Irish dance sessions which continue this evening and Sunday afternoon at Metropolitan Church's Ephraim Evans Hall on Pandora.

In the meantime, details of the Highlights Concert which brings the festival to an end at McPherson Playhouse May 7, are already being worked out with close attention to such aspects as limiting the program to two hours over-all and providing ample variety as well as top quality.

Piano concerto and other senior classes and more vocal sessions are scheduled next week with vocal championships including the Rose Bowl Wednesday, and piano championships including the City Medallion, Friday. Strings, brass and woodwind, school choral and bands also join the parade.

There will be two honor programs. Monday night's attractive event is the dance honors performance at McPherson Playhouse and on Thursday it's the school's turn to have their own big night.

Festival staffers are busy reminding those interested in the latter, that an election rally at Central Junior Secondary has ousted the concert from that auditorium. It will take place instead at Reynolds Junior Secondary.

B.C. Poetry Suit Proceeds

BELLEVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Six members of the last Parliament, Toronto Globe and Mail and Toronto Sun are among defendants named in a writ issued by the Supreme Court of British Columbia, one of the defendants said Friday.

Jack Ellis, Progressive Conservative candidate for Prince Edward Hastings, said the plaintiffs, B.C. poet William Bissett, Talon Books Ltd., and Blewointmentpress, also of B.C., are suing for breach of copyright law and defamation. He said he was served with the writ on Thursday.

Five other members of the last Parliament, Hugh Anderson, Liberal member for Comox-Alberni, and Progressive Conservative members John Fraser of Vancouver South, Robert Wenman of Fraser Valley West, Arnold Malone of Battle River and Gus Mitges of Grey-Simcoe, were also named in the writ, Ellis said.

Other defendants are The Review, a Madoc, Ont., community newspaper, an internal newspaper published at Canadan Forces Base Comox and the base's commanding officer, a Southam Newspapers company, T. Eaton Co. of Canada and Woodward Stores Ltd.

Ellis, Hastings MP in the last Parliament, said that about eight months ago he criticized Bissett's poetry, publication of which in Vancouver was paid for by a $28,000 grant from the Canada Council.

In a news release he sends each week to newspapers in his constituency, he also criticized the Canada Council grant and sent copies of the poetry to editors who wished to see the material, he said.

He also said that not all the newspapers that printed his press release were included in the suit.

The book containing the excerpts, A Legacy of Spending, was written by Vancouver radio personality Ed Murphy, a former member of the parliamentary press gallery, Ellis said. It chronicled federal government spending "of dubious merit."

Editors select top women

Editors of nine North American religious publications have announced their selection of six outstanding Christian women leaders of our time.

Those chosen are: Mother Teresa, the Albanian nun who cares for "the poorest of the poor" in Calcutta; Dorothy Day, social activist who was a co-founder of the Catholic Worker movement; Barbara Ward, British writer and expert on issues of development and environment; Corrie Ten Boom, who with her family sheltered Jews in Holland during the Second World War, suffered in prison for that and continued to witness to her faith there and afterward; Lee Tai-Young, the first woman to become a lawyer in South Korea, worker for laws to end discrimination against women; Annie Jiagge, a Ghanian supreme court judge, champion of women's rights, and president of the World Council of Churches.

"Their words and actions have transformed the lives of thousands of people; their lives exemplify what it means to be Christian today," says The United Church Observer in its April issue. The Observer is one of the nine Protestant and Roman Catholic magazines, going into two million homes, which are simultaneously publishing the women's stories. The editors considered more than 50 names in a search for women who, through their faith in God, have "markedly affected the world."

Women's outreach theme follows Year of the Child

The Ecumenical Women's Outreach will hold a Spring Gathering May 4 in First Baptist Church, North Park at Quadra. In keeping with the Year of the Child, the theme will be Today's Child, Tomorraw's Adult. What is (or is not) being done in Victoria, particularly for children in trouble, will be discussed by three speakers who are experts in this field.

The Rev. Wm. Taylor, counsellor at William Head Correctional Institution, will speak on Building-Blocks for Delinquency. Rev. Laura Butler, of Metropolitan United Church and the Greater Victoria Council of Churches, will discuss the Social Credit government's proposed Family and Child Services Act; and Mrs. Bernice Yates, volunteer co-ordinator for the Youth Detention Centre, will speak of the needs of the children at the centre and what volunteers can do. Each topic will be followed by questions and discussion, with an opportunity to learn, to share and to plan.

The gathering runs from 10 a.m. (registration at 9:45) to 2:30 p.m. All women are cordially invited. Bring a box lunch to share; either sandwiches, cookies or fruit. Tea and coffee will be provided.

Church chronicles

The Holocaust film Let My People Go! will be shown at 7:30 p.m., Sunday, at the Christadelphia Hall, 1396 McKenzie. Admission is free.

Let My People Go is a documentary story of the Jews, showing their struggle for acceptance, their persecution and their establishment in Israel. This film was telecast over the CBS network and received much critical acclaim. Preparation involved many months of gathering and editing more than 300,000 feet of film, including several captured German newsreels.

This dramatic, hour-long historical account should be of great interest to students of all ages and Bible students in particular, but children under 12 should not be encouraged to attend.

The Christadelphians are sponsoring the film because they believe the Bible foretells the story of the Jews in such detail that a comparison between the filmed events and Bible prophecies will convince any open minded observer that God is not dead but still rules the affairs of the nations of the world.

According to the church, the birth of the state of Israel tells Bible students that Christ's return to the earth is near.

California's Allan Hancock College A Cappella Choir, will make three appearances in Greater Victoria churches next week.

Conducted by Glenn Montague, the choir will appear at Oak Bay United church May 5 at 8 p.m. Admission is $2 for adults and $1 for pensioners and students.

It will perform at St. Paul's United in Sidney May 6 at 7:30 p.m. and at the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormon) at 7:30 p.m. May 4. Donations will be accepted by all churches to help defray expenses.

Montague received his bachelor and master degrees in music theory and conducting from Brigham Young University and has had wide experience in music education at many levels.

The choir gives about 50 concerts a year and has been praised for bringing a high quality of choral music to thousands of listeners.

•

On Sunday at 6 p.m., The Sound of Praises will present a sacred concert at Parkdale Evangelical Free Church. The Sound of Praises is a 12 voice mixed chorus from the Prairie Bible Institute, Three Hills, Alta.

The group has enjoyed an enthusiastic reception in weekend concerts throughout Alberta during the school term. They are now in the middle of an extended tour of British Columbia. Selmer Hanson, vice-principal of the bible school, is travelling with the group and will bring a short message.

Parkdale is located on the corner of Jackson and Tolmie.

The Prairie Bible Institute, which began in 1922 with an enrollment of eight students, now has a yearly student body of about 1,000 in the bible and high school departments. This school has made a vital contribution to the ministry of the Church throughout the world. About 2,000 foreign missionaries as well as 1,400 pastors and Christian workers in North America have received training there.

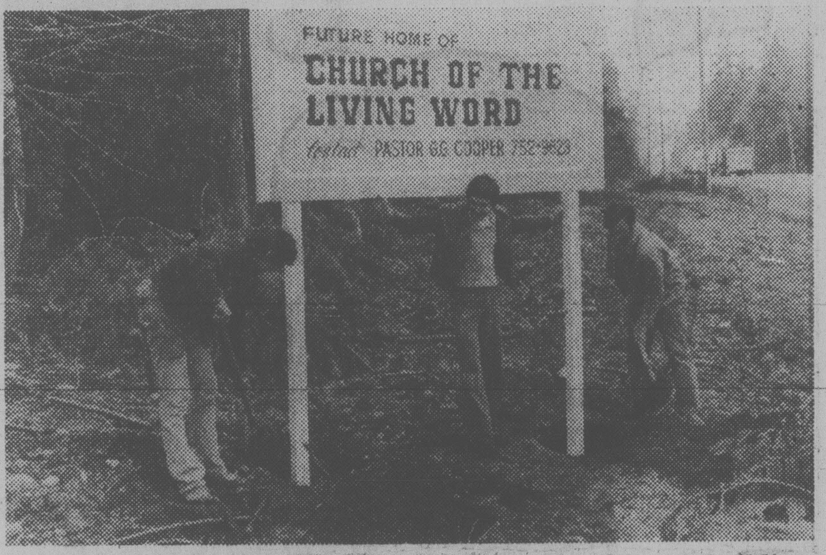
The Pacific Union College brass ensemble will present a concert at Christ Church Cathedral Sunday May 6 at 3:30 p.m.

The 16-year-old ensemble is directed by Carlyle Manous, chairman of the college's music department. He conducts both the symphonic band and the brass ensemble and is also an accomplished horn performer.

The group has made a number of extended tours of the Pacific Northwest.

New church for Qualicum area



Shovels mark start of biggest Qualicum area church building

QUALICUM BEACH — Qualicum Beach will soon have a new church capable of seating approximately 600 worshippers, making it the largest church in the entire Qualicum-Parksville district. It is an independent church and all the members live locally.

Garry Miller, one of the directors, said the building—for the Church of the Living Word—will be built almost entirely by volunteers. There are contractors in the congregation and also representatives of the various subtrades. He expects construction to start within a month and the church should be ready for use by fall.

The auditorium will be wedge-shaped with a floor sloping down toward the apex. Approximately 400 seats will be provided on the ground floor and another 200 in the balcony. Also included in the plans of the first phase of construction are Sunday school rooms, a banquet hall, offices and a study for pastor G.G. Cooper.

Miller said the church has a great interest in youth and the directors would like to add a gymnasium next winter. Director Rick Wuerch said eventually he hopes it will be feasible to add a Christian grade school.

The directors expect the church will be the highest building in Qualicum. The maximum height would be approximately 44 feet which contravenes the village building bylaw stipulating a maximum height of 25 feet. The directors will appeal for a dispensation.

This is not the only complication. The directors purchased the two adjoining lots between the junction of the Island Highway and the bypass leading to the village shopping centre. One lot is in the village and the other is outside.

Miller said in a letter to the village council, "In order to construct the church it has come to our attention that both lots have to be incorporated into one lot and either considered to be in the village of Qualicum Beach or in the regional district. We have considered the possibilities and would like to have both lots incorporated into the village."

The council discussed the matter briefly at its last meeting, but came to no decision.

Clearing of the land has started. Miller said trees will be retained to create a parklike setting. He said there will be a paved parking lot.

The Church of the Living Word is a nondenominational church. Miller said it is basicaly from Pentecostal and Apostolic backgrounds, but it is completely independent and not associated with any other church.

He said, "We have a lot of faith that the church is going to be built and paid for. We believe the Lord is going to provide." He said all present members of the church live in the Qualicum-Parksville area.

Pastor Girvan Cooper lives in Qualicum and has licence to conduct baptisms, marriages and funerals. He presides at the church services which are being held in the Victoria room of the Island Hall in Parksville. There are evening services on Sundays at 7 p.m. and Bible study at 7:30 each Thursday evening. Miller said anyone is welcome to attend.

Miller said Cooper preaches the full gospel of the old and new testaments of the Bible and adds nothing from any other books or sources.

Miller said the Church of The Living Word is a community church for all age groups and will welcome anybody.

Perspectives

By Rev. J. A. Davidson

"It is strange that religion and the sense of humor should have fallen out so often, always to the degradation of humor and the impoverishment of religion." I came across that statement recently while dipping into a book by the English Methodist theologian, Walter Russell Maltby, based on lectures he gave at Emmanuel College, Toronto, just over 50 years ago.

There still seems to be a falling out between humor and religion. Christians today do make their little jokes but they rarely seem to bring humor to bear on themselves as Christians and on their churchly activities. An excessive seriousness seems to hang over much of our religion today.

On the other hand, humor in our society now seems rather unhealthy. Much of our humor is crude and trivial, and it is generally devoid of compassion. It specializes in sharp quips and brittle wisecracks. It makes much of double entendres (and single ones, too) about sex and sanitation. It takes delight in the other person's discomfiture, guffawing at the polished insult and well-honed bit of sarcasm. It often sniggers at what others hold holy, and it finds crude blasphemy comical. Much of our humor today really isn't very funny.

Reinhold Niebuhr, one of the most influential theologians of our time, wrote an instructive essay on the relations between faith and humor, in which he said this:

"Insofar as the sense of humor is a recognition of incongruity, it is more profound than any philosophy which seeks to devour incongruity in reason. But the sense of humor remains healthy only when it deals with immediate issues and faces the obvious and surface irrationalities. It must move forward toward faith or sink into despair when ultimate issues are raised."

Then he added: "There is laughter in the vestibule of the temple, the echo of laughter in the temple itself, but only faith and prayer, and no laughter, in the holy of holies." Niebuhr saw humor as a means of dealing with incongruities on life's surface, and he suggested that humor can be an agency of faith.

Coming at the theory of humor from another angle, Stephen Leacock, said this: "Humor may be defined as the kindly contemplation of the incongruities of life, and the artistic expression thereof." He added that humor "is born, as it were, in perplexity, in contemplation of the insoluble riddle of existence."

Religious people today, especially those with deep theological and moral and social concerns, need humor as a prophylactic against the wrong kind of seriousness, especially seriousness about themselves. They should try to bring to their religion the sensitivity and the humaneness and the gentle judgment which are engendered by the right kind of humor: humor can at least dull the cutting-edges of many of the sins of the spirit to which religious people are so readily inclined.

'Compulsive Rapist' Gets Nine-Year Prison Sentence

A man described as a compulsive rapist was sentenced Friday to a total of nine years in the penitentiary after pleading guilty in B.C. Supreme Court to five charges covering a 15-month period.

Leandre Leon Bonneville, 35, was sentenced by Mr. Justice Martin M. Taylor to nine years on each of two rape charges; two years for forcible seizure of a woman; two years for detaining a woman for the purpose of sexual intercourse, and one year for theft of money using threats of violence.

All terms are concurrent and it was recommended the sentence be served at the Matsqui Regional Psychiatric Centre, the only penal institution in Canada with full-time medical staff specializing in sex offenders.

Taylor said his first reaction to the case was that a life sentence would be appropriate, but ended by saying he hoped there would be an early change in Bonneville's psychiatric nature enabling him to return to society soon.

He also suggested there could be early parole to assist in the rehabilitation process.

After sentencing, Taylor added a further prohibition provided in the Criminal Code, preventing Bonneville from possessing a firearm, ammunition or explosive for a period of 20 years.

Two counts against Bonneville were transferred to Victoria from Nanaimo where he had pleaded guilty to raping an 18-year-old girl and stealing money from her at knifepoint at Campbell River July 2, 1978.

He pleaded guilty to two new indictments covering two offences at Colwood Sept. 24, 1977, involving forcible seizure and rape of a 21-year-old hotel clerk, and to detaining a 24-year-old married woman against her will for the purpose of sexual intercourse at Comox Dec. 30, 1978. A sixth count on that date, alleging forcible seizure, was stayed.

In each case the accused held out a knife to back up threats against the women, and although some of the clothing was slashed off one victim none was wounded. The Colwood woman suffered a hairline skull fracture when Bonneville struck her in a struggle to put adhesive tape over her eyes.

The accused was arrested shortly after the Comox incident and was later connected to the others by police who noticed similarities between them, including the knife, a van with a bed, and the use of baby oil and adhesive tape on the victims.

In one case after rubbing baby oil on the girl, Bonneville applied a battery-operated vibrator to parts of her body.

Crown counsel Don Laughton said the accused seemed contrite, almost apologetic following the attacks. He quoted medical opinion to the effect that without treatment, Bonneville would remain a threat to the safety of women.

Forensic psychiatrist Dr. William Forster said he believed Bonneville would respond to therapy and medication but he could not predict how long that might take. The man was not insane in a legal sense, he said.

Dennis Murray, also appearing for the Crown, said the protection of the public was a major concern but rehabilitation was important. He said the accused showed some insight as to his problem by telling police he felt that his mind had a black side and a grey side, and that the black side did things the grey side would not think of.

Court was told of several unsatisfactory female relationships Bonneville had experienced, including two failed marriages.

Defence counsel Ted Strongitharm concurred with the suggestion of sending Bonneville to Matsqui. He said the accused had come to understand the frustrations which drove him to commit the offences and sincerely seeks help. He called witnesses who testified to Bonneville's attitude since being held in jail awaiting trial.

Taylor said Bonneville's state of mind was bound to be of concern to the court, describing him as a man suffering frustration through his contact with life who sought relief "through these terrible things."

The judge said he believed Bonneville's description of his feelings when he did them, and believed him when he said he pleaded guilty to the Campbell River offences in order to get help, even though there was a possible defence.

Ultimately, Taylor said, protection of society must be the dominant consideration.

Sentence Held In Stabbing

Sentence was suspended in B.C. Supreme Court Friday for a man who attacked a woman in her bedroom and stabbed her last July.

Mr. Justice Martin R. Taylor placed Anthony David Lowe, 26, on probation for two years after he pleaded guilty to a charge of intending to wound Sharon Ann Trahon, causing bodily harm, in her James Bay apartment at 114 Menzies about 3 a.m. July 8.

Crown counsel Brian Smith said Lowe had been bothering Trahon, with whom he had cohabited for three years before separating in 1977. Lowe had been drinking that night, gained access to the apartment while the woman slept, woke her and pulled the covers off.

Trahon got dressed, went to a neighbor's and called police.

Smith said Lowe co-operated with the police and allowed them to drive him to a taxi stand. But instead of going home, Lowe went back to the apartment, re-entered, attacked the woman, stabbed her in the abdomen with a steak knife, choked her and threw her against a wall.

She leaned out a window yelling she had been stabbed, and police arrived again to arrest Lowe. They took Trahon to hospital with a four-inch-deep wound, where it was found the knife had missed vital organs.

Defence counsel Barry Mah Ming disagreed with some of the circumstances as related, and explained Lowe had been trying to gain access to a daughter in Trahon's custody.

He ordered Lowe to get employment if not self-employed, to stay away from Trahon, to abstain from alcohol except in his own residence and not to become intoxicated at any place, not to have a firearm.

Saint Laurent in Wise Phase

By BERNADINE MORRIS

PARIS — After the space cadets and the beaux arts costumes, Yves Saint Laurent's collection moved softly into the frenetic fall ready-to-wear scene.

Neither the clothes nor the music in the Salle Saint-Eustache, the largest of the tents set up in the Forum des Halles to house the fashion presentations, was designed to blast the audience out of their seats. Moderation seemed to be the code word.

For a Saint Laurent show, the audience was unusually restrained, shrieking only for the few bad-taste designs, thigh-baring side-wrapped skirts, which appeared about half way through the 200-piece presentation.

But by the time the long show was over, there was an ovation.

The appearance of the bride, the traditional ending to fashion shows here, more honored in the breach than the observance these days, brought enthusiastic cheers and everyone rushed backstage afterwards to assure the designer he was a genius.

He is also a wise man. Part of the trick of designing clothes is sensing the mood of the people who are to wear them. Saint Laurent has this knack down pat.

No histrionics for him. He simply makes sensible clothes.

"Something to fill the store with," said Robert Sakowitz, the Texas retailer, with some satisfaction.

Saint Laurent, who alternates between enfant terrible and sage, is in his wiseman period. He has made clothes that even 20-year olds, can see on their backs.

That's his daytime scheme. Sometimes he substitutes pleated panne velvet skirts for the plain kilts — and shows the same velvet skirts with more elaborate blouses for evening. Practical notion, that one.

Nothing faddy about his hemlines either. While most designers feel compelled to shorten skirts so they bare the knees, Saint Laurent sees fit to cover the knees, just as Chanel always did.

Chanel's clothes have lasted for more than half a century. Saint Laurent has only been designing for 21 years, but he may prove as durable.

The one deviation from the familiar is his knee pants. They fit snugly and are handled exactly like the pleated skirts, paired with corduroy blazers or braid-edged velvet jackets or turning up under three-quarter coats or raincoats.

They may catch on, like the Bermuda shorts of the 1950's and they may be forgotten tomorrow. It doesn't matter. There's lots of other things going on.

Ingledew's
for the great names in fashion
749 Yates Street

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: I am 19 and have a year-old girl. Her father liked to sleep with me but didn't like the responsibility of being a father, so he left.

I swore I'd never get involved with another man like him again.

Now I have a man who is just the opposite. He wants the responsibility of being a father but doesn't like to sleep with me.

He's a businessman who says he's got business on his mind constantly and never thinks about making love.

We've been living together for a year and he's slept with me only twice. He told me he doesn't think we will ever sleep together again. He's loyal, stays home most of the time, doesn't drink, and is a good man. We work together in his store.

Do you think we will make it together?

CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: All that's necessary for two people to "make it together" is for each to need the other. If you can live happily without sleeping with him, and he can live happily with things the way they are, there's no reason why you can't make it.

DEAR ABBY: When Randy first started to date, he'd say: "The girl has no curfew, and I have to be in before SHE does. It's embarrassing."

Randy is our 16-year-old son, and I'd like to know what the parents of teen-age girls are thinking of.

We're not unreasonable, Abby. We ask Randy to leave the girl's house at 10 p.m. on school nights and 1 a.m. on weekends. If he's going to be held up for any reason, all we ask is a phone call.

This girl he has been seeing a lot of lately has just turned 16. She is under no restrictions on dating. Even when nothing special is planned, she asks Randy to come over and just sit around. Needless to say, we are in a constant state of worry. Our son has had a good upbringing, but even nice kids fall in love and get carried away. I'm afraid they're playing with fire. If Randy came to us and said he wanted to get married before he finished his education, we'd be heartsick.

Abby, please, please tell parents of girls to help parents of boys by curbing those dates and long hours! We love our children, and their well-being is the responsibility of both sets of parents. If this is too long to print, maybe you can shorten it and say it better.

RANDY'S WORRIED PARENTS

DEAR PARENTS: I couldn't have said it any better, and I'm printing every word.

DEAR ABBY: A lady I knew (not well) passed away, leaving a husband and two children. I want to express my sympathy to the husband and let him know that I'm available to do whatever I can to help him through his time of sorrow.

I know him only to say "hi" to. He is very well fixed financially. Attractive, too, so I'm sure there will be a lot of women after him.

I'm a divorcee, new in town, and I don't want to appear too forward or he might get the wrong idea.

I would like to write him a sympathy note that will be out of the ordinary. Something witty or eloquent. Any suggestions along that line?

— VIRGO LADY

DEAR VIRGO: If you didn't know the lady well, and know her husband only to say "hi" to, write a brief condolence note. Don't try for wit or eloquence. And please restrain your eagerness to help thim through his time of sorrow, or it won't be the "wrong" idea but the right one that might cause him to think you're after him, too.

Doing the Town

With DOROTHY FRASER

Silken luxury . . .
We almost apologized to the strikingly turned-out lady we brushed against in Gibson's last Monday . . . who turned out to be a manikin wearing a honey of a two-piece pure raw silk suit . . . Straight slim skirt with slash pockets and French seaming . . . Blouson shirt top with French seaming detailing . . . long button-down tabs on the dropped shoulders . . . Now here's a suit that's very different, very understated and very high style . . . Versatile, too, because top would be great with trousers . . . and the skirt could be worn with anything! . . . We fell in love with a couple of pure silk print dresses . . . One is sand with a brilliant green print . . . Tiny collar with lapel . . . straight skirt with set-in green panel matching the green silk belt . . . The other is a pale grey with red . . . Simple ¾-length sleeve with dropped shoulder, V neck, straight skirt and red patent belt to emphasize the red in the print . . . Both these dresses are standouts! . . . Another dress . . . this in a gold matte jersey . . . has an unusual neckline in that the set-in yoke tops a V neck . . . Skirt is soft but slim over the hips . . . slit in front. A matching ultrasuede sash sets this one off . . . And for the first sunshine look of summer, see the little polyester crepe dress that looks as if it had been sprinkled all over with confetti! . . . Gibson's, 708 View St., 384-5913.

Stepping into summer . . .
Andrew Geller . . . those beaufitul shoes we used to buy in New York . . . are made in Italy now, and a small shipment has just arrived at Munday's to add a bit more spice to their big selection of quality footwear! . . . There are three city sandals we think extraordinarily smart and just a bit different . . . "Nicole" an opened-up sling in versatile honey color with a not-too-high stacked heel . . . priced at $68 . . . "Saturn" . . . same heel, same price . . . has an interwoven strapped vamp with instep strap . . . "Zebra," a nice-looking sandal with bias strap, is also in honey leather and costs $65 . . . In the dressier Geller shoes, there's "Lips," a very well-fitting shoe with the look of a sandal but with closed heel and sides, open on top . . . Moleskin or navy kid, $75 . . . "Gleam," in a beige pearlized calf, is a very delicate, light-looking sandal with a high, slender heel and an unusual strap treatment, almost on the bias. Tagged at $64 . . . Finally, there's what we might call a "fun" sandal . . . High wooden heel and elasticized linen strap which fits any foot. Natural or black, at $50 . . . You'll like this easy-to-wear little sandal which will look great with your summer cottons! . . . Munday's, 1203 Douglas St., 383-2211.

Beautifully suited . . .
We can't play favorites, but we can tell you that for a lot of people we know, Charmante's is their favorite store! . . . On our visit there this week we saw suits in lovely spring shades . . . One from Irving Samuel is very smart in shades of camel. The 3-button jacket is camel-colored silk and wool tweed . . . Skirt with a bit of a flare, and silky blouse are both plain camel . . . Another suit by Attractive has a belted wrap jacket in a solid beige, while the skirt is a beige check . . . Should you be thinking in terms of an elegant ivory suit for spring, do see the beautiful one by Horst Mandel of Germany . . . It's an all-wool double knit with belted jacket, and soft cuff on the sleeve . . . Skirt has the interesting side front slit with a good wrap-over . . . This same model also comes in red . . . Soft pink and rose are popular colors this spring . . . Charmante's have a very pretty pink suit, belted, with a shawl collar and sheath skirt slit in the front . . . Really, this is a very good year for suits at Charmante's! . . . While you're looking, do give a thought to one of the gorgeous hand-loomed Irish knit dresses by Pallas . . . They're hand washable . . . come in one or two-piece styles, with either long or short sleeves . . . and may well become one of the best-loved garments you've ever owned! . . . Charmante's, Hillside Shopping Centre, 595-1555.

Leafing through magazines like "Better Homes & Gardens" . . . you've likely drooled over the gorgeous fabrics used in various room decors . . . but told yourself sadly that only in New York could such wonderful materials be found! . . . You'd be very much mistaken, though, as a visit to Standard Furniture's Drapery dept. will quickly prove! . . . Never have we laid eyes on a more beautiful display of household fabrics, and so very diversified . . . There isn't a better household fabric house in town, and more and more people are coming to recognize this . . . Not only do Standard have a really good stock of materials on hand so you can buy all you need and take it home with you . . . or have it made into slip covers, drapes, bedspreds, etc. in Standard's own workroom, where the workmanship is impeccable . . . So much so that Standard is always getting unsolicited letters of appreciation from delighted customers . . . Among the new spring merchandise are some beautiful screenprinted cottons with a satin finish . . . All vat-dyed, pre-shrunk, protected with Scotchgard . . . the colors and shadings are incredibly rich! Another interesting fabric has a texture that would make delightful slip covers and drapes . . . this with a Zepel finish . . . Colors are so well-co-ordinated that you can use several different prints together . . . If you haven't been in Standard lately, go in and see all the exciting new fabrics for spring! . . . Standard Furniture Co., 737 Yates St., 382-5111.

Get in shape for summer . . .
Maybe you've never experienced all the wonderful, pampering, beautifying things you can have done to yourself to make you look and feel every inch a woman! . . . Well, summer's not far off, and this is the perfect time of year to start getting in shape for it . . . by making an appointment at Cosmetique a la Carte . . . the skin care studio which is so very expert at making you over . . . and has recently expanded its services with the addition to the staff of Michelle . . . formerly with the Charming Lady . . . Michelle has been giving us manicures for years and we can vouch for her expertise! . . . European-trained, she is now giving facials as well as manicures, pedicures, and a paraffin wax glove procedure which softens the hands, puts an end to dry skin . . . We know you'll like Michelle and her expertise! . . . Irene, of course, is a highly trained aesthetician and her face treatments are in great demand . . . She gave us one last week which transported us into seventh heaven! . . . Lovely to feel so clean and fresh-faced! . . . Irene is also now giving treatments to do away with cellulite . . . break down the fatty tissue and firm the thighs . . . Makes you look better in your new swim suit! . . . Then there's Jean who's a whiz at electrolysis . . . And you can buy here the Rosa Graf and Dr. Renaud products which are so good for your skin! . . . Cosmetique a la Carte, 830 C Pembroke St. 388-5353.

New co-ordinates in pure silk . . .
Eaton's Signature Shop have just received a group of co-ordinates designed by Charlotte Ford . . . a lady who's doing some pretty spiffy things in the fashion field! . . . There are pure silk "status jeans" . . . (the status being Charlotte Ford's name embroidered on a hip pocket!) . . . These come in cream, and cost $80 . . . Red/cream/blue striped blouses with mandarin neck, tucked front with concealed buttons and white trim are also pure silk and look wonderful with the pants . . . $100 for these . . . Then there are black silk skirts in a straight style with a bit of easing at the hips and front slit just off the centre . . . $95 . . . And gold silk blouses with tucked detailing on yoke and cuffs, little tie neck and full sleeves. These have the rather sweet, old-fashioned look which is such good fashion today . . . Price is $125 . . . Another of the Charlotte Ford co-ordinates is a camel and black print blouse with notched shawl collar, little shoulder pads . . . It too is pure silk, priced at $115 and would look elegant with the black skirt . . . or a pair of the pure silk black pants with wide waistband and tucked front . . . made in France especially for Eaton's . . . There are a lot of other different pants in silk that would also co-ordinate with these Charlotte Ford things . . . For instance, the gold blouse would be elegant with dark brown pants . . . Eaton's Signature Shop, 382-7141. loc. 242.

"Twice Around" still the best . . .
When Mrs. Joyce Empey started her consignment fashion store in Victoria going on six years ago . . . she brought something new . . . and pretty exciting . . . to this city! . . . "Twice Around" Fashions grew and prospered because standards were kept very high indeed . . . This was no "second hand" store . . . in fact we heard quite recently that a lady bought several garments there without realizing she wasn't in a regular dress shop . . . until she saw the low, low price tags! . . . Now this delightful shop is no longer alone in the consignment field . . . so Mrs. Empey has raised her standards higher than ever, if that were possible . . . which in our book, makes "Twice Around" still the best! . . . Everything taken there must be cleaner than clean . . . in absolutely pristine condition, and up to the minute in style . . . If you've anything you can no longer wear, which meets all these conditions . . . "Twice Around" is the place to take them . . . Consignments are taken . . . in absolute privacy . . . each Wed., Thurs. and Fri. from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. . . . and right now, they're looking for spring and summer things . . . We saw some lovely dresses there this week . . . A brand new ice blue polyester jersey evening dress with both a jewelled and a plain belt . . . $200 when bought . . . now $64 . . . An Eva Fisher dress, size 12, which you can have for $46 . . . Lots of other clothes just looking for the right people to wear them! . . . "Twice Around" Fashions, 1029 Cook St., 383-3123.

Per Pound, Yes, But . . .

Wonderful World of Animals

DEAR DR. MILLER: Patty, our grown-up little terrier, only weighs ten pounds. We are thinking of getting her a companion, something in the 100-pound class. We'd worried about the food cost of a big dog, but we are assured they eat hardly anything compared to a small one. Is this true? — C. Y.

DEAR C. Y.: Not exactly, though it's true on a per pound basis Patty would need more calories than an adult large dog. Even so, when you multiply the caloric requirement by a factor even approaching ten, it has to count up. A growing large breed could easily consume as much per pound as Patty; and even when mature, the big dog would still consume around six times as much as Patty.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Primrose, our very beautiful part-Himalayan, was spayed three years ago. Just this last week there has been a male stopping by her window in the living room and he's the prettiest cat, next to her, that I have ever seen. He's terribly interested in her, and the thought has come to me — could her surgery be reversed? — I. D.

DEAR I.D.: Poor Primrose. Prim and proper — and that's the way she is going to stay. The surgeon couldn't manage because spaying is forever, at least as far as the feline population is concerned and that's the way it should be. Even if such surgery were reversible, you couldn't really rely on that handsome bachelor cat, anyway.

DEAR DR. MILLER: My pet garter snake Gene loves goldfish but they are too expensive. Last week I tried giving him hamburger meat. Is it too fatty? — M. B.

DEAR M.B.: Gene would survive on hamburger for a considerable period of time, but too much fat, an imbalance of minerals and a lack of bulk make it undesirable as a long-term reptilian repast.

KNIT AND CHAT

Toys and Dolls

By MAY E. MacLEAN

If you should be visiting Britain this summer and enjoy museums, try to visit the Bethnel Green Museum in London. It's only a few steps from the London Wall Tube Station and it's well worth spending some time there.

I find it wise to have one or two such places planned for days when the weather isn't too good. This particular museum will appeal to old and young alike.

You'll find one of the finest collections of toys spanning the last two hundred years, from doll's houses, merry-go-rounds, trains, shops etc. Their doll collection is extensive with some of the oldest dolls on record, with dolls dressed in every conceivable dress and outfit. I found it fascinating.

The museum's also noted for its collection of wedding gowns through the ages, and some from famous people including royalty. Endless time and patience went into the making of most of them, for any are from the premachine era.

Another section I found very interesting was the "Samplers." Every young girl had to learn the various stitches that way and some have survived from as early as 1796, all painstakingly sewn with the girl's name and the date. Some featured fancy stitches, others the alphabet with different styles of lettering.

In one corner, dress-making patterns from 1877 were displayed along with Myra's Journal of Dress and Fashion. There were Ladies Companions from 1911, also some Weldon's paper patterns from before the First World War.

This week's pattern No. 7266 is a crocheted doiley with flowers and leaves around the outer edge. These can be worked to any color scheme, so why not base them on the time of year? Pastel light colors are ideal for spring, fullbodied colors for summer, warm, autumn shades for fall and poinsettia red for winter!

To order Leaflet No. 7266, send 75 cents in coin, PLUS a stamped self-addressed envelope to: Knit and Chat, 486 Montford Dr., Dollard des Ormeaux, Roxboro, Que., H96 1MB.

Pro Job Best For Insulating

By A. J. HAND

Q. — I was considering having the walls of my home filled with foam insulation. After getting an estimate, though (over $1,000), I am having second thoughts. Isn't there some way I can do this kind of insulating myself? — G.H.

A. — You have alternatives. You can cover the interior surfaces of your walls with foam board insulation. Then, for fire protection, you should cover the insulation with something like ⅝-inch fire-resistant wallboard. This adds a lot of thickness to your walls, however, and you'll have to redo all the trim around windows and doors. And you'll also have to deal with any electrical switches and outlets.

I would suggest that if you go to all that bother, you get the highest R-value you can. Some types of foam give only R-3.6 or so (for inch-thick board) while others go as high as 5.26.

You can get about the same amount of R-value by pouring loose vermiculite into your stud spaces through holes cut in the walls just below ceiling level. If there are no firestops in your walls, and if you don't mind patching up all those holes afterward, you can get an R-value of over 7 this way. But firestops will create large uninsulated areas.

You can also get estimates for blown-in mineral wool. This should be cheaper than foam, though it won't give as high an R-value. On the other hand, mineral wool won't give you some of the problems (odor for one) that come with poorly gunned foams.

All in all, contractor-applied insulation (either blown mineral wool or gunned foam) is probably your best bet, despite the expense. It gives the best results with the least disturbance to your home. It costs more, but I believe it is worth it.

Q. — I have steam heat. Is it worth the bother to insulate the steam pipe where they run through a unheated crawl space? Also, what should I use to paint my radiators? My neighbor says aluminum paint conducts heat the best, but I don't like the way it looks. Is there anything else as good? — H.W.

A. — Sure, go ahead and insulate those steam pipes. I wouldn't use any of those newplastic materials, though. I'm not sure they can take the heat. Probably a double wrap with fibreglass would be best.

As for your radiators, don't use aluminum paint. That's a common error. Light colors, and highly polished and reflective surfaces radiate heat less effectively than dull, dark surfaces. A thin coat of some dark paint is a better choice.

Banking Is Everybody's Business is a big 12-page booklet that is published by the Bank of Nova Scotia. The booklet does a fine job of presenting the history of currency and banking in Canada and around the world.

For as long as currency has been in use, men have been trying to copy it. Today, some counterfeiters are so skilled at imitating bills, that it is very difficult for us to tell good money from bad. However, there are five or six differenes that are usually sensible to either sight or touch.

Banking Is Everybody's Business supplies the reader with some foolproof methods for detecting phoney Canadian and American bills.

You can receive a free copy of this publication by writing to the Public Relations Dept., Bank of Nova Scotia, 44 King Street West, Toronto, Ont. M5H 1E2. You may request your copy in either English or French.

How to care for your house plants . . .
Plenty of indirect or diffused sunlight — artificial light is also helpful.
Temperature from 70 to 75 degrees during the day, lower at night. Avoid cool drafts or any direct source of heat — including the top of TV set, which is hot when set is on.
Over-watering is fatal — when soil is dry to touch, water thoroughly but don't allow plants to stand in water. Fertilize regularly.

Cauliflower: Real Tricky to Grow

GARDENING

jack beastall

Cauliflower is a difficult vegetable compared to Broccoli and not many local home gardeners have constant success in growing.

No other vegetable is so sensitive to weather conditions. Cool, damp weather can destroy the crop through stem rot, while a prolonged dry spell will cause bolting to seed instead of forming the heads of flower buds. Slow, steady growth is the key to success with no checks of any kind.

Another important point is to set out only young plants not more than four to five weeks from seeding. If older, the crop can be complete failure. To be safe the gardener has to grow seedlings at home because it is impossible to know the age of purchased plants.

To maintan steady growth, the soil must have large quantities of compost incorporated and be reasonably fine in texture. Plant injury results when soil pesticides or fertilizer is added to the soil, or to water, at planting time.

The early varieties which are normally started in a heated greenhouse in February for setting out in late March are ready too soon here on the coast, where the weather is not yet settled.

But the Early Snowball started indoors after mid-April and set out from the middle to late May have been successful. For outdoor sowings we have to use the late varieties and start them in seed beds around the end of May for planting out at the end of June.

The leaves are tied together loosely to protect the curds before the heads are the size of a small teacup. Exposure to sun, or overhead watering, after this size is reached results in severe browning.

Self-blanching varieties are tricky to handle because they are essentially cool-weather plants and the leaves will not self-wrap, if the weather turns warm.

To save cost of production, commercial growers are now experimenting with mass plantings of these varieties so that the leaves are crowded upright to form a natural protection for the heads. The plants are set out 16 inches each way. It may be worth trying in the home garden when a large quantity is needed for freezing.

Cauliflower has to be picked at its prime or the crop is lost, so the average family needs only three or four plants set out at a time. Three sowings of six seeds about two weeks apart is better than having a dozen plants going to waste.

Once we get away from the idea cauliflower has to be white, we may find the green and purple varieties much better suited to growing in the home garden.

Early Purple Head is an eight-inch head variety on tall plants. The flavor is rated as excellent and it is highly recommended for freezing.

Chartreuse is a bright green with nine-inch heads on large plants requiring about four square feet each. This variety is claimed by some home gardeners to be far better in flavor than the white and ranks at the top of the list for freezing.

Both the purple and the green heads turn pale green when cooked. The vitamin count of cauliflower is about the same as for head cabbage, low in vitamin A, fair in B1 and B2, and high in vitamin C.

Kale is a plant closely related to the Wild Cabbage of northern Europe, and is known also as Borecole (bor-eck-o-lee).

The succulent green leaves are used raw in salads or lightly cooked, having a flavor milder and sweeter than cabbage.

The plant seems to be unknown to gardeners from warm climates or from areas of deep snow and severe temperatures in winter, but its nutritional value, its improved flavor after a few frosts, and the fact that snow can be pushed aside and leaves gathered, make it an ideal vegetable for the home garden or allotment.

Two species have provided the selections we grow today, one from northern Europe giving us the Green Scotch Curled, the other the milder districts in Siberia is responsible for the Siberian Kale. Being native to northern latitudes indicates a preference for cool temperatures, also its natural hardiness.

Kale ranks highest of all types of cabbage in vitamin content, being an excellent source of vitamins A, B2, and C, and good in B1, therefore a valuable winter and spring vegetable.

The Scotch Curled, with dark green deeply creased succulent leaves on short stemmed plants, is much preferred to the lighter green smooth leaved Siberian which is lower in vitamin content and taller growing.

Some confusion exists about the growing and harvesting of kale. From Virginia south it is a commercial crop grown over winter and marketed in early spring, the plants being cut off at soil level. This practice is not recommended for home gardeners on Vancouver Island.

To have a continuous supply from October until mid-April, a few of the larger leaves are taken from several plants at each picking. The young top growth is left to develop as the plants increase in height.

Being a biennial it produces flowers rapidly as temperatures rise in April. The home gardener then gathers the shoots and buds, like broccoli, every day for use in soups, stews, salads, or as cooked greens. The plants are then pulled up, chopped into pieces, and added to the compost heap.

Locally, seed is sown outdoors in a prepared seed bed during the latter part of May while temperatures are still cool, and young plants set out 15 inches apart four weeks later.

Hydrated lime is added to the seed bed and to each planting hole to reduce soil acidity and discourage the slime mould that causes club root.

It is wise to set the plants beside a path that is clean and passable in winter because cooks do not like wallowing in mud to gather vegetables even as nutritious as kale.

Soil preparation should be thorough as for cauliflower and broccoli, with plenty of compost added to hold moisture at the roots over summer.

Fertilizer, if needed, must be used with care because forced growth late in the season is not hardy to winter cold.

Work for Week

Container-grown trees and shrubs may be added to the garden at any time the soil can be well prepared. All containers must be removed for freedom of root growth. Fill planting hole with water before finally adding soil for levelling. Water-spray plants in following weeks, if humidity is low; soak root area each week.

Outdoor sowings of a few lettuce, corn salad, endive, spinach and white turnip can be made. Warmer soils can be sown with a short row of carrot, radish. Peas can go into almost any garden now, and possibly scarlet runner beans, these are hardier than others.

Hardy perennials including alpine plants should be planted before end of this week. They need early season conditions to establish. Don't neglect watering needs, if present dry weather continues.

If squash seeds not started, do this now — sow in egg cartons two seeds to section. Thin to one. Transplant out by end of May. Soy beans can be started in same way.

Damages $111,500

MONTREAL (CP) — A surgeon was held responsible Friday for $111,500 damages to a woman he performed an operation on nearly 11 years ago.

The verdict against Dr. Israel Shragovitch was taken under review by Superior Court Justice Charles Phelan, which means it could be altered after the judge hears arguments from opposing lawyers.

Plaintiff Mary Murphy was 45 when she entered Jewish General Hospital for the removal of a gall-bladder and the repair of a hiatus hernia. During the operation the esophagus, which was involved by the hernia, was damaged.

The jury found Dr. Shragovitch guilty of a fault of commission or omission which resulted in the damage.

French Allowed in Man. Courts

MONTREAL (CP) — Provincial opposition party leaders here Friday welcomed a Manitoba appeals court ruling that French can be used in that province's courts.

"It's too bad that this wasn't challenged a long time ago," Quebec Liberal leader Claude Ryan said. "It's unfortunate that two or three generations of Franco-Manitobans had to suffer."

But Parti Quebecois ministers were saying nothing.

The judgment, issued Thursday, upheld the Manitoba Act of 1870 allowing the use of either English or French in the courts, and overruled the Official Languages Act of 1890 which requires only English be used in court proceedings.

Chief Justice Samuel Freedman of the Manitoba Court of Appeal also ruled that acts of the legislature need only be printed in English.

Ryan said the Manitoba dispute arose because Canada's constitution is not clear enough. Future constitutional arrangements, he said, must be more clearly spelled out.

He said he was glad of the ruling but he had not studied it in detail and would refrain from possible comparisons to Quebec.

Quebec's language legislation, Bill 101, limits — but does not eliminate — the right to speak English in the province's courts and decrees that provincial legislation be adopted in French only, with English translations to be "unofficial."

These provisions have been declared unconstitutional by both Quebec Superior Court and Quebec Court of Appeal.

Meanwhile, Manitoba Attorney-General Gerry Mercier said Friday that his province supports the right of Quebec to legislate restrictions on the use of English.

But Mercier said that doesn't necessarily mean the province agrees with the way those rights have been exercised.

He said he hopes the Supreme Court of Canada will delay hearing a challenge of Quebec's language law so that it can hear a similar Manitoba case on thurday's toba Official Language Act ruling in his province.

If the cases are heard at about the same time it will not be necessary for Manitoba to make a separate presentation to the court in the Quebec case as had earlier been planned.

The Supreme Court has scheduled a hearing on Quebec's controversial Bill 101 for June 11.

Shoyama New Head Of Atomic Energy Firm

OTTAWA (CP) — A shake-up of senior management at Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. will make T. K. Shoyama the new chairman and Ross Campbell, the present chairman, director of foreign sales of AECL's Candu nuclear reactors.

The changes were announced Friday by Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie, who also said that AECL President James Donnelly will continue as chief executive officer of the Crown corporation.

Shoyama, until recently deputy minister of finance and former deputy minister of energy, will take over as chairman Tuesday. He will continue as special adviser to the prime minister on the constitution.

Campbell will remain a director of AECL and will become president of Atomic Energy of Canada International, which sells Candu reactors abroad.

Gillespie said that "AECL like any growing corporation is continually examining its goals and objectives and altering its management structure so as to better achieve them.

"I believe that in this case Mr. Campbell's and Mr. Shoyama's particular talents and skills will greatly enable the corporation to focus increasingly on foreign sales."

RCMP, Two Constables Sued

SASKATOON (CP) — Two RCMP officers are being sued by a man who says he was shot at least five times on a southern Saskatchewan Indian reserve and left lying in a ditch.

The two officers are being sued individually and the police force also is being sued, Merv Ozerny, a Melville, Sask., lawyer said Friday.

Orville Wayne Bear of the Kahkewistahaw Reserve, about 235 kilometres east of Regina, says he was shot five or six times by two officers when they tried to arrest him on the reserve in June, 1978, said Ozerny.

The shooting was confirmed by a senior RCMP officer in Regina.

Bear survived the incident and was later acquitted on the only charge against him that successfully went to court.

The two officers were investigating a complaint from a reserve resident that someone was drinking in a farmyard.

Ozerny, representing Bear, said the suit against the officers has been filed in Melville Court of Queen's Bench and the action against the force is being taken in the Federal Court of Canada in Regina.

The action, for aggravated damages as a result of assault and battery by virtue of the shooting, also claims damages suffered by a woman Bear was living with, Sandra Tipitat, who allegedly suffered a miscarriage, Ozerny said.

RCMP Insp. Ernest Greba of Regina, responsible for an internal investigation into the incident, said police were called to the reserve by a resident who complained of someone drinking in a farmyard.

A suspected vehicle went into the ditch and was approached by officers, said Greba. The policemen concluded drinking was involved after looking at the vehicle.

He said it was not correct to say that the officers fled the scene.

AirCan Dividend

OTTAWA (CP) — Air Canada has paid the government a dividend of $13.2 million for the 1978 fiscal year, the transport department announced Friday.

Unaudited financial statements indicate Air Canada's 1978 net profit, after taxes, will be about $47 million. In 1977, the corporation's net profit was $20 million.

The 1978 dividend represents a return on investment of approximately 9.5 per cent.

NALP Member Running

VANCOUVER (CP) — A member of the North American Labor Party (NALP) is running in the May 22 federal election — as a Social Credit candidate.

Carlo Dallavalle, a 36-year-old steelworker, said the NALP, which publishes a newspaper called New Solidarity and focuses its attacks on Maoists and other left-wing groups, wants to make sure the Liberal and New Democratic parties are kept out of power.

"I see the top priority of our campaign is defeating the threat of an NDP-Liberal government. . .that would indeed mean national socialism for Canada," he said.

Dallavalle said Premier Bill Bennett made no mistake when he linked the provincial NDP to "national socialism", the political philosophy espoused by Hitler's Nazi Party.

He said he will seek a mandate for a "ruthless crackdown on drug trafficking and drug abuse."

PM Can't Peg Pension Cost

By PAUL WHITELAW
Special to the Times

ELECTION 79

LONDON, Ont. — Prime Minister Trudeau says he can't fix a price tag on his campaign proposal that housewives be allowed to contribute voluntarily to the Canada Pension Plan (CPP) and draw benefits when they reach retirement age.

But Trudeau maintained at a news conference yesterday his call for major reform of the CPP and private pension plans shouldn't be compared to Conservative promises, which have caused him to label Joe Clark the "Seven Billion Dollar Man."

"We're not saying elect us and we'll double the Canada Pension Plan," said the PM.

Trudeau explained he was only "indicating directions" that might be followed by the government and private employers and it would be impossible to determine the precise cost without further study and consultation.

By contrast, Trudeau insisted, the Tory leader has made promises to which price tags could be easily affixed, such as Clark's proposal to allow partial deductibility of mortgage interest from personal income taxes.

Trudeau, at a lunchtime speech in Toronto, said the Liberals would hold a National Conference on Pensions this fall to review the feasibility of changes in the CPP and private plans.

The conference would bring together "labor, business and pensioner groups as well as the provinces."

Trudeau said the provinces would have to concur before women who do not work outside the home would be able to contribute or draw CPP benefits. He noted that any "major revision" of the public pension scheme would require approval of two thirds of the provincial governments.

If the option to participate in CPP were to be widely used by housewives, the federal government would have to assume the employer share of contributions now paid on behalf of workers employed outside the home.

The PM also announced the federal government would take the initiative with private business to achieve "a more equitable retirement income for all Canadians."

Speaking Friday night before one of the biggest crowds of his campaign, Trudeau dawdled with a megaphone-voiced heckler throughout a 30-minute defence of the Liberal's record on the economy and national unity.

Interrupted more than a dozen times by cheers and applause as the overwhelmingly friendly audience attempted to drown out a small group of noisy critics, Trudeau repeated his election message that only the Liberals can keep the country prosperous and united.

There were more than 1,200 people jammed into the high school auditorium as he spoke in this traditionally-Liberal city and an overflow crowd of more than 1,000 listened as his remarks were piped into an adacent gymnasium.

Trudeau's performance was pure political theatre that delights Liberal organizers, who know hcklers bring out the PM's best oratorical skills and add excitement to his well-worn message about the economy and unity.

"This is the time for Canadians to forget we're from Ontario or Quebec or the West or the East," said Trudeau, telling the crowd to elect a government that will "be able to stand up and speak with one strong voice for all Canadians."

The PM portrayed Clark as a puppet of the provincial premiers who would weaken the country by giving in to all their demands without a fight.

He told his audience they'd be "paying $175 a year more on average to heat" their homes if the Liberals hadn't kept the price of Alberta oil from reaching international OPEC levels.

NDP's First-Year Tab: $3B

By PATRICK NAGLE
Special to the Times

TORONTO — New Democratic Party election campaign promises would cost an estimated $3 billion in the first year of operation, Leader Ed Broadbent said Friday.

In an interview taped for broadcast Sunday, Broadbent said this would raise the federal deficit to between $14 and $15 billion, but that the longer term effect would stimulate the national economy.

Broadbent made similar arguments during the last session of Parliament before dissolution for the general election May 22.

The NDP leader also said that if the people of Quebec gave a clear vote for independence, based on an honest and unequivocal question, a federal prime minister would have to sit down and negotiate, because the only alternative would be violence.

Broadbent stressed he was answering a hypothetical question concerning Quebec separation.

He was interviewed for the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation program Sunday Morning for April 29.

He defended his plan to raise the national deficit as economic good sense.

He said government spending could not be compared to a family budget because the average family was not making annual capital investments.

He preferred to compare the Canadian government to General Motors — a corporation he said he had no special fondness for — because corporations make investments for the purpose of earning a long-term payback.

"If we had a deficit now, we could have a surplus in three years," he argued with questioners Wayne Cheveldayoff and Geoffrey Stevens.

The money would be spent in economic stimulation such as tax cuts, housing, energy and urban transport programs.

The result, Broadbent said, would be a monetary return to the government in terms of reduced unemployment insurance and welfare payments plus increased revenues from income and corporation taxes as more people found work and more goods were produced.

He said Canada could afford a short-term $15 billion deficit in terms of a percentage of the country's gross national product.

Other countries in Asia and Europe had incurred deficits at higher percentages of GNP and, in the cases of West Germany and Japan, the countries had reaped substantial returns on their investment.

Broadbent was questioned about Quebec in the context of Progressive Conservative leader Joe Clark's statement that Quebec could not leave Canada unilaterally.

"I think that is one of the most irresponsible statements ever made by a Canadian political leader," he said of Clark's position.

"We don't want to make our country a situation that's comparable to modern Ireland."

The NDP leader insisted he could not conceive such a happening.

"We're going to win that referendum and win it well."

There is no federal mandate to negotiate an association with a sovereign Quebec, as Parti Quebecois Premier Rene Levesque proposes to seek in a provincial referendum, he said.

"If there were a clear vote on an unequivocal question the only option open to a prime minister of Canada would be to sit down in the toughest and most serious and the saddest discussion in the history of our country, because what would be involved is the discussion of the breaking away of one of our heartland regions," Broadbent said.

Clark Promises More Jobs For Youth at Same Cost

ELECTION 79

TORONTO (CP) — Joe Clark promised Friday that a Progressive Conservative government would create more jobs for youths but not spend any more money than did the last Liberal government.

Speaking in Peterborough, Ont., Clark outlined several proposals to shrink the jobless rolls, especially among those aged 15 to 24 who make up almost half of Canada's 976,000 unemployed.

Much of Clark's prescription for youthful unemployment is already being administered but under different names.

The federal employment department estimates that it spends about $600 million annually on programs aimed directly at youth. Other funds are spent on the labor market in general, including the young unemployed.

Clark says he would spend no more money for his youth program and even save $5.5 million by streamlining existing administrative costs.

Several existing programs would be reorganized under a new youth unemployment secretariate, the administrative arm of Clark's proposal. The Liberals established a youth employment branch in January to co-ordinate federal programs.

The main features of the Conservative program include:

—Creation of a national youth corps for up to 15,000 persons. They would receive the minimum wage for working on community or environmental projects. The cost would be $90 million. Many projects in the $193.4 million Canada Works program are similar to those envisaged for Clark's youth corps.

—Payment of $1.25 hourly wage subsidies for 100,000 workers in the private sector for up to two years at a cost of $280 million. The Liberal government introduced a similar program but the Conservatives insist businessmen will like theirs better and, therefore, create more jobs.

—Expansion of existing federal-provincial job training programs to 120,000 positions for training either on the job, in the classroom, or a combination of both. The cost would remain at $225 million.

—Development of a national apprenticeship policy in conjunction with the provinces, unions and private industry. Clark was unable to give a price tag.

—Abolition of such current job creation programs as Canada Works, Federal Labor Intensive Programs (FLIP), Local Employment Assistance Program (LEAP), Job Experience Training (JET) and Katimavik, which assists native groups.

—Increasing the allocation of unemployment insurance funds for job creation by $200 million.

RCMP Bugging, Say Communists

TORONTO (UPC) — The Communist Party of Canada has vowed to lay a complaint before the McDonald Commission on Royal Canadian Mounted Police practices if a number of mysterious devices found in its Toronto headquarters Friday prove to be listening devices.

The devices — small black cylinders dangling from wires and other electronic paraphernalia — were found Friday morning by CPC Executive-Secretary Alfred Dewhurst when he came to work.

Dewhurst and other party workers immediately blamed the RCMP's Security Service.

Archeologists Tear Hair Over Pompeii Deterioration

POMPEII (AP) — Pompeii, the bustling Roman city transformed into a ghost town by a blanket of volcanic dust 1,900 years ago, is threatened with a second death, say Italian preservationists.

"We're doing our best to preserve and consolidate what has been excavated, but the task is overwhelming," said Dr. Stefano De Caro, the resident archeologist and administrative director of Pompeii.

A Pompeii exhibit now is touring the U.S.

Bruno Molajoli, an art historian, termed the fight against the city's deterioration "almost hopeless . . . if unchecked it will lead to the total, final destruction of Pompeii."

The city, located about 23 kilometres southeast of Naples, once was a popular resort of stately one-and two-storey villas, shops, paved streets and public theatres graced with statues and mosaics.

The morning of Aug. 24, 79 AD, the long-dormant volcano Vesuvius blew up, covering the city in ashes. The site was discovered in the early 1700s and unearthed. Now, the forces of nature, thievery and poor administration are taking their toll.

Two-thirds of the city, home of 20,000 people at the time of the eruption, has been laid bare. There are no plans to excavate the remainder because officials want to preserve what has been found.

Molajoli said the buildings are mostly brick with marble or plaster facing, which is not fit to resist severe weather.

The houses have no roofs because they collapsed under the weight of cinders, exposing to the sun and rain the delicate wall paintings.

The city's paved streets and stepping stones are taking a terrible beating from the feet of more than 1.3 million visitors a year, while a parasite-infested vegetation chokes ancient walls and threatens foundations, Molajoli said.

Security also is a problem. De Caro said he needs 250 guards to do an effective job, and because he has only 178, he has closed parts of Pompeii to visitors.

Four serious thefts took place last year. In one, thieves took four valuable statues and chiselled six paintings from the walls of a house.

Tourists sneak off with bits of decorated plaster, mosaics or stones. Others engrave their names on the walls next to the names of ancient Pompeiians.

De Caro and Molajoli agree that it is impossible for one resident archaeologist to oversee the city. "It's a job for 20," said Molajoli.

Italy's parliament appropriated almost $4 million in 1976 for a five-year program for Pompeii, but De Caro said a permanent arrangement must be found.

Pompeii preservation 'almost hopeless'

What's His Line? It's Flying Kites

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Flying kites, says Ron Moss, is more fun than fishing because you can see what's on the end of the line.

He talks about once playing out string 9.6 kilometres in length for a kite that went so high he couldn't see it.

He says he has the only kite shop in Dayton, and perhaps the largest one in the United States.

"Kite flying has become respectable again," he notes.

"Time was when people saw a grown man out flying a kite, they just figured he was some kind of kook. Well, people don't feel that way anymore."

Moss's store is filled to the ceiling with kites — at least 360 varieties in all sizes, colors and designs. He has kites shaped like birds, insects, airplanes and sailing ships.

One kite that was handmade in China and has real gold embroidery sells for $190. Another is a miniature replica of the 1903 Wright Flyer airship.

"This shop has a kind of hypnotic effect on people," says his wife Pat. "So many of them walk in, stop, look around and say, 'Wow!' That's the kind of reaction we like to get from customers."

"It used to be that all kites were made of paper," Moss says. "Now, new designs have been made possible by advances in aerodynamics. Kite flying, in turn, has become a very popular sport."

Moss, 45, says he became fascinated with kites when he was four years old and figures he has flown all kinds since then — like that one with the line of epic proportion.

Fires Plague Philippines

MANILA (Reuter) — Dozens of lives are lost and millions of dollars worth of property are destroyed every year in fires throughout the Philippines, leaving insurance companies in a quandary.

Last year, factories, market places and private homes worth more than $100 million were destroyed. Hardly a day goes by in the country without a serious blaze.

In a one-month period alone this year there have been 173 fires, causing damage amounting to at least $7 million, killing two persons and injuring many more.

What is the cause of the fires? President Ferdinand Marcos and Defence Minister Juan Ponce Enrile have pointed the finger at arsonists trying to cash in on insurance claims, or alleged subversives trying to hurt the economy.

But much of the trouble, by the government's own admission, may arise from the expanding economy.

Time and again, causes of fire are traced back to faulty electrical wiring.

Of the latest spate, Police Chief Maj.-Gen. Fidel Ramos told the National Fire Council that only 12 blazes appeared to be arson. A further 86 were accidental. The causes of the other 78 could not be determined.

Fire engines often have to bring their own pumps and water supplies even in the metropolitan area of Manila, where nearly 1,000 fires were recorded in 1978, with 88 deaths and 270 injuries.

Indonesians Pay $80,000 a Body

The top prices are obtained for the best quality bodies — especially those of holy men.

The soaring prices have caused an upsurge of grave robbing in various parts of Indonesia, where people believe that medicines prepared from dead bodies can make the living invincible, or that mere possession of a dead body can give protection from enemies.

Vanity Publishing's Booming Business

By ANDRES OPPENHEIMER

HEMINGWAY
. . . said to have done it

NEW YORK (AP) — Henry David Thoreau, Edgar Allan Poe, George Bernard Shaw and Ernest Hemingway supposedly did it. And increasingly, more U.S. publishing houses are assuring that if you do the same — finance the publication of your own book — you can become a literary giant as well.

Lynn Ruskin, a graduate of Syracuse University now living in the Virgin Islands, probably knew she would not become a new Hemingway when she wrote Don't Get Hit by a Coconut — "a profound description of life in the Caribbean islands," according to the book jacket. But she still thought her book was interesting and well-written enough to find a market.

Not finding a trade publisher interested in her work, she wound up approaching a "subsidy" or "vanity" house, where she was encouraged to take a chance in the unpredictable world of publishing by financing the book herself.

Like Mrs. Ruskin, an estimated 5,000 U.S. writers lured by the prospect of starting successful careers in writing offer their books every year to vanity publishing houses, which for fees ranging from $2,000 to $20,000 will undertake the immortalization of books.

"The rising manufacturing costs have forced the trade publishers to take fewer chances with new authors. They want to secure their investments, and, therefore, tend to reprint old best-sellers or publish new works by writers with an established reputation.

Uhland says subsidy publishing accounted for 10 per cent of all books published in the U.S. in 1978, and that that figure is likely to increase in the future.

There are drawbacks, and some authors of vanity books have become disenchanted with their publishing houses.

Rev. Pair Larsen of Brooklyn says he was told by his publisher, a leading New York subsidy house, that his book TTeenager's Sex and Impossible Parents, would find many interested readers.

"But they mislead me greatly," he says, after spending $3,875 on publication of the book. "I later found out that none of the main bookstores would take subsidy publishing houses' books, and I ended up having to sell copies to my friends."

More enraged than Larsen, Frank Stellema, the author of Oh Kim! My Son! My Son!, filed a $20-million suit against a subsidy publisher, alleging fraud in its solicitation and publication of manuscripts.

Stellema claims most vanity publishing house advertisements, such as are misleading "since those firms are not publishers as the word is generally understood."

Uhlan says since the Stellema suit, vanity publishers are becoming more cautious in their dealings with prospective customers.

"I warn them that only 10 per cent of the books we publish actually make any money for their authors," he says. "But I would be lying if I didn't tell them there aren't any authors of subsidized books who have made lots of money."

'Wee Folk' Invading Ireland

By DONAL O'HIGGINS

DUBLIN, Ireland (UPI) — Staunch Irishmen stand ready to man the barricades against a planned invasion by foreign-based leprechauns.

The call to rally behind the "Little People" came from the national daily newspaper, The Irish Independent, which saw sinister moves afoot in Europe.

"On this issue, the whole country must stand firm and full square behind the 'Little People,'" it said. "God help us if we don't."

At issue was an Irish law prohibiting the import of souvenirs — such as made-in-Japan leprechaun statues — unless they were clearly marked "foreign."

"Japanese leprechauns!" the Independent exclaimed. "Have you ever heard the like?"

The European Economic Community has charged that the Irish law discriminates against other member states and threatens to haul the Irish government before the European Court if it is not repealed within two months.

"All leprechauns are Irish," the Independent said. "No leprechaun has ever left our shores and any leprechaun who tries to come into the country under the guise of a returned emigrant or masquerauding as an Irish leprechaun should be shown the door."

Leprechauns may not have left Ireland, but leprechaun-watchers say they're going somewhere. It seems the wee folk are fleeing their traditional haunts in droves — or, at least, folks don't seem to be seeing them very much any more.

More than a decade ago folklorist Kevin Danaher, a respected authority on the ways of the "Little People," sounded the alarm.

"Nowadays they are not seen as often as they used to be, for they have not taken kindly to modern civilization," he said.

Advances since then seem to have upset and bewildered them still more. Wooded hillsides and shady glens that once sparkled to the pranks of the merry mischief-makers, at least in legend, now stand forlorn and silent. Scrublands have been cleared, marshes drained and hillocks flattened under the relentless demands of progress.

As their playgrounds have been eaten up by giant machines, the little people are disappearing faster.

Time to Roll Up Sleeves: New Official Line in China

PEKING (UPI) — China's Communist Party is telling the people it's time to stop talking politics and settle down to work.

Unity and hard work are the order of the day in the new line being laid down in Peking's government-controlled press.

Daily editorials stress that the turmoil that rocked the country from 1966 to 1976 is over, and that most of the wrongs done thousands of Chinese in those days have been righted.

One result of the new line is an end to the limited experiment with free speech that began in November.

But another is creeping free-enterprise — and abandonment of the idea that in a Communist country all workers should receive nearly equal pay.

China's leaders are anxious to get on with their program of modernizing the economy and building Chinese military strength. And as a result they are promoting the idea that skilled, diligent workers should earn more than lazy ones.

Some diplomats in Peking believe the policy was laid down in a speech to high level party workers in March by Vice Premier Deng Xiaoping (Teng Hsiao-ping), the sparkplug of the modernization program.

No such speech has been reported in the Chinese press, but April has seen a barrage of editorials demanding national unity and hard work.

"The great storm of class struggle has passed in our country," declared the People's Daily, the party's official newspaper, in a front page commentary.

"The next task is to lead the people to unity and reach a common understanding so as to build China into a powerful country," it said.

"To produce more oil is the politics of the oil production front. To produce more coal is the politics of the coal miners. To produce more grain is the politics of the peasants. To study hard is the politics of the students."

The free speech experiment starting in November allowed people to paste handwritten posters on walls along Peking streets. One result was a rash of criticisms of the late Chairman Mao Tse-tung, Premier Hua Guofeng (Hua Kuofeng) and other high officials.

Some posters called the whole socialist system into question.

Then the Peking city government banned wall poster criticism of high party leaders or of the Communist system itself. A few posters appeared protesting the order, but they quickly disappeared.

Posters now are restricted to a 200-yard strip of wall on Changan boulevard, Peking's main throughfare, and they are non-controversial.

Some diplomats believe that between 30 and 40 dissidents and critics of the Peking government have been jailed or at least pulled in for questioning. There is no way of verifying the number, but about half-a-dozen arrests were seen by foreign correspondents.

Shanghai, China's largest city, this year has had small but public political demonstrations, mostly by young people protesting assignment to work in other parts of the country. One took place during the visit of the Boston Symphony in March.

The city's mayor, Peng Chong, chairman of the Shanghai Revolutionary Committee, recently reminded citizens that China's four basic principles are socialism, dictatorship of the proletariat, obedience to party leadership and upholding the ideas of Marx, Lenin and Mao.

"At present there are a few trouble-makers who often make difficulties in our society," Peng said. "They spread the wrong idea of suspecting these four basic principles."

Since late 1976, the country has been gripped by debate over rehabilitating those unjustly jailed or fired by the party and government between the start of the Cultural Revolution in 1966 and Mao's death in September, 1976.

The line now is that most of that decade's wrongs have been righted and it is time for people to concentrate on their work.

BRIAN SMITH ON PROVINCIAL AFFAIRS

LABOUR MANAGEMENT RELATIONS

Labour-management relations concerns all British Columbians these days. My experience as Chairman of the Greater Victoria Labour Relations Association and as a barrister who has represented both labour and management over a period of 15 years - has convinced me that good labour relations do not come through slogans and promises, but only through understanding and hard work.

Your Provincial Minister of Labour, Allan Williams, is a capable and fair minded man who has reduced confrontation in labour-management relations, has drastically reduced the number of work hours lost from strikes and lock-outs and has succeeded in restoring a measure of sanity to wage bargaining.

You may remember that in 1975 the public sector unions in Greater Victoria were seeking wage increases in excess of 30% in one year alone, and as a result, we had a work stoppage which disrupted services for over three months. I know the pain and anguish caused by this work stoppage, because as an elected official I rode in garbage trucks and together with members of my Council, helped keep essential services alive.

We have come a long way in four years in our labour-management dealings and it is my belief that a better climate and understanding now exists between the participants and the public and there is recognition of the necessity of restraint. Many union members whom I have talked to believe that the labour-management climate has improved under the Social Credit Government and they approve of the steps which the Government has taken to prevent strikes and lock-outs in essential public services.

I strongly endorse these advances. I support the Minister's promise that he will not introduce right to work legislation. I will try to promote harmonious relations between labour and management as well as to strive to end work stoppages of any kind in our vital transportation services.

Japanese Buy Billion Comics

By IKUO ANAI

TOKYO (Reuter) — The Japanese read more than one billion comic books a year to escape the intense pressures of their competitive, pressure-cooker society.

Stories in children's comic books are about soccer and volleyball players, boxers and wrestlers, movie and pop stars, hobbies and ideal school teachers.

The most notable change in the Japanese comic boom, which started in the 1960s, is the fact that the educated masses now are reading the magazines.

A 1977 government report said that 60 per cent of university students regularly read comic books and that the number of comics read by high school students has risen 6.5 times in the last 20 years.

A separate survey by the Japan Recruit Centre, a private research institute, said university students read 7.6 magazines — including comic books — each month on average.

Less than one per cent of university students polled said they had never read a comic.

Mitsuo Matsuzawa, a former high school principal, said in his recent book Comic Books Are Spoiling the Brains of the Japanese that school children are under intense pressure to pass highly competitive examinations.

Aircraft Hush Money

LONDON (CP) — There may be something to the adage that silence is golden. At least, airlines using London's three international airports are finding that the more noise they make, the emptier their coffers will be.

As of April, noisy airliners at the three airports are being required to pay higher landing fees, while planes recognized as being quiet are receiving a discount, says the British Airport Authority (BAA).

Having announced a six-per-cent rise in landing fees from April 1, the authority says aircraft complying with internationally reached noise certification standards — popularly dubbed good neighbor planes — would qualify for a discount at Heathrow, Gatwick and Stansted airports.

The ruling means that landing charges for quiet aircraft will stay about the same as before the April increase.

Most of the new generation of wide-bodied jets such as the European Airbus are certificated as quiet aircraft.

BAA warns that the new scheme is likely just the first step in a bid to discourage noisy airliners, adding that it will consider widening the fee differential between quiet and noisy planes in future.

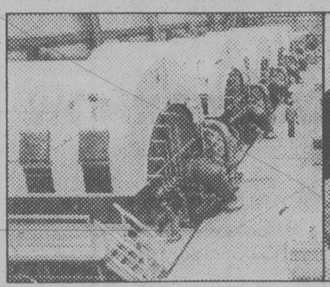
5 FREE SHARES IN THE BRITISH COLUMBIA RESOURCES INVESTMENT CORPORATION.



You will share in 81% of Canadian Cellulose.

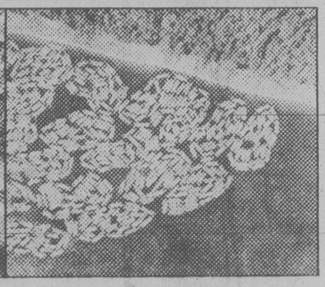
You will share in 10% of Westcoast Transmission.



You will share in 100% of Kootenay Forest Products and Plateau Mills.

Ownership of our resource industries should be in the hands of individual British Columbians. To encourage this trend, your government is offering five free shares in the recently-formed British Columbia Resources Investment Corporation to every eligible resident of our province. Following are answers to the most important questions concerning this unique offer—

Who is eligible?
Every person who has lived in B.C for the past year—and who holds or has qualified and applied for Canadian citizenship—is eligible for five free shares in B.C.R.I.C. Those 16 years of age and over should apply for shares on their own behalf. For children under 16, application should be made by the mother or guardian. Infants, born in B.C. on or before June 15, 1979 and resident here since birth, also qualify for free shares. Application, again, should be made by the mother or guardian.

Free shares are also available to those ordinarily resident in B.C. who have been temporarily absent from the province during the 12 months immediately preceding the offer, provided such persons are otherwise eligible.

What do B.C.R.I.C. shares represent?
The B.C. Resources Investment Corporation is the holding company for shares held by the province in a variety of B.C. resource industries and enterprises. B.C.R.I.C. holds 81% of the common shares of Canadian Cellulose, 100% of the common shares of Kootenay Forest Products and Plateau Mills, 10% of the common shares of Westcoast Transmission, plus oil and gas rights in a vast area of northeastern B.C.— investments transferred at a value of over $151 million. B.C.R.I.C. shares represent partial ownership of this whole range of enterprises.

How can I apply?
Application forms are available at banks, trust companies, credit unions and investment dealers throughout B.C. When making application, you must present two of the following pieces of identification: a.) driver's licence; b.) Social Insurance card; c.) Medical Plan card. If you are 65 years of age or over, a Pharmacare card is sufficient proof of identity.

Mothers or guardians applying for children under 16 are required to furnish only a medical plan number or a birth certificate for such children. Young people, 16 and over, who have not yet obtained such identification, may establish their identity by presenting their birth certificate or other acceptable identification—in person—at the office of their local Government Agent (or, in the Lower Mainland, at their local Motor Vehicle Branch office).

Those unable to apply in person may delegate a suitable individual to act on their behalf—that person must utilize a Power of Attorney form, available where applications are made.

To take advantage of the free share offer, you must submit your application by June 15, 1979. Should there be extenuating circumstances—absence from the province during the application period, for example—an appeal may be made to the Ministry of Finance by September 30, 1979.

When do I receive my shares?
Distribution of free shares by B.C.R.I.C. will begin immediately after British Columbia Day, August 6, 1979. The person making application has until September 30, 1979 to pick up the shares where application was made.

Can I buy additional shares?
Yes. If you qualify for free shares, you have the option of purchasing up to 5,000 additional shares at a price substantially below their underlying value. This price will be specified on your application form.

No individual or corporation may own more than 1% of the voting shares of B.C.R.I.C. (although pension funds may own up to 3%). Corporations and pension funds, however, are not allowed to participate in the initial share issue.

Will I be able to sell my shares?
Yes. Stock market trading in shares is expected to commence shortly after the distribution date . . . and at this point, a "market value" will be established. However, it is hoped that a majority of British Columbians will not only retain, but enlarge, their share holdings. In this way, they will participate directly in the continued expansion of our resource industries, while ensuring that control of these industries remains in B.C.

What if my shares are lost or stolen?
The free shares will be "bearer" shares—in other words, owned by and saleable by the bearer, and not registered to any individual. Therefore, there is no protection against loss or theft. However, each block of 100 shares or more will be registered in the name of an individual shareholder (and thus protected). Because registering takes additional time, persons planning to purchase blocks of shares for registration should submit their applications as early as possible. Note: only the holders of registered shares will be eligible to vote on company matters and receive financial information and other communications from the company.

How will B.C.R.I.C. use its money?
All money invested in the B.C. Resource Investment Corporation will be used to further its investment objectives, including the development of resource industries within British Columbia.

Other questions?
For further information on the free share offer—or about B.C.R.I.C.— contact: B.C. Government Public Information. In Vancouver, phone 873-3455. In Victoria, phone 387-6121.

In other areas, information is available through your local Government Agent.

Shops for 'Grand Hole'

PARIS (AP) — For years and years, les Halles was at the very core of the Paris psyche.

Les Halles was by day a fabulous market dedicated to France's feisty shopkeepers and the national obsession with the pleasures of the palate.

By night it was powdered and perfumed, a painter's Paris of cafes and wine-soaked gaiety, of sad-eyed ladies of the night sipping absinthe, of round-the-clock decadence balmed with onion soup at dawn.

In the name of progress and urban renewal, the market was moved to a Paris suburb and in 1971 the centre-city district that Emile Zola called the belly of Paris was gutted.

Since then, it has remained an empty 25-acre crater-like excavation which the French call "the grand hole."

A half dozen schemes to fill the embarrassing void all were stillborn, victims of bureaucracy, political warfare and a paralysing identity crisis rooted in Paris's conflicting visions of its future.

Now Mayor Jacques Chirac has set forth what he hopes is the final answer. While many Parisians feel his plan adds little to their proud esthetic heritage, most appear to agree with the conclusion of a local resident:

To be completed in 1983, the Chirac plan calls for a 12-acre park with pedestrian walkways and rooftop gardens in the shadow of the Saint-Eustache Church, a 16th-century architectural prize that survived the urban-renewal zeal.

Plans for a four-tiered shopping complex and underground community facilities have been maintained, with an eye toward complementing the Paris Metro's vast new express subway crossroads nearby.

There also are plans for a luxury hotel and an amphitheatre, all being managed by a specially organized semi-private corporation drawing on federal, municipal and private funding.

Beside impeccably French gourmet shops there now are American-style, youth-oriented fashion and houseware boutiques, and bars and restaurants with such familiar New York names as Joe Allen's and Mother Earth, offering such un-Gallic delights as hamburgers.

Wedding

Nelson — Bagley

Oak Bay United Church was the scene of a double-ring ceremony on March 3, 1979, when Jennifer Patricia, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Bagley, and Mr. Gregory Ray Nelson, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Nelson, were united in marriage, Reverend Wm. Van Druten officiating.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride entered the church with her father and was radiant in a full-length gown with scoop V neckline, slight empire waist, the bodice scalloped with hand-clipped Swiss guipure lace accented with pearls. The long fitted sleeves were also of pearl accented hand-clipped lace. The chiffon skirt fell into graceful fullness with a longer-than-chapel-length train. A capulet headpiece of lace with pearls held a fingertip-length veil of illusion tulle edged with the same lace. A string of pearls, a gift from her groom completed the effect. A bouquet of stephanotis, pale pink roses and baby's breath was carried. Maid of honor was Shelagh Macartney and bridesmaids were Joan Bagley, sister of the bride, and Brenda Apps, wearing identical gowns of pale pink and carrying bouquets of stephanotis, crystals, and baby's breath. The groom wore a grey three-piece pin-striped suit with a deep pink rose boutonnier. Attendants were Ian Nelson, brother of the groom, as best man, Mitchell Kendz and John Mikitka, as ushers.

Reception followed at the Georgian Lounge, Empress Hotel, with dinner and dancing. Telegrams from Ottawa and Cornwall, Ontario, and Auckland and Wellington, New Zealand, were read. Many out-of-town guests attended. Toast to the bride was proposed by Mr. Floyd Nelson, Clearwater, B.C., a long-time friend of the bride's family. Ian Nelson was master-of-ceremonies.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

5—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

309 — IN MEMORIAM

PEAKE — In loving memory of dear father, George F. Peake, who passed away April 28, 1977.

If I had one lifetime wish,
One dream that could come true,
I would pray to God with all my heart,
For yesterday and you.
If teardrops were a stairway
And memories a lane,
I would walk all the way to heaven,
And bring you back again.
A thousand times I needed you,
A thousand times I've cried
If all my love could have saved you dad
You never would have died.

—From his loving daughter Christine.

PEAKE — In loving memory of a dear husband, George F. Peake, who passed away April 28, 1977.

If we could have one lifetime wish,
One dream that could come true,
We'd pray with all our hearts
For yesterday and you.

—From loving wife Eileen and family.

ANDERSON, ANDREW — In loving memory of our dear Father and Grandfather who passed away April 28, 1975.

Just a memory fond and true
In our hearts you will live forever
For we thought the world of you.

—Carmel, Mary and boys.

BEAVER-JONES - In loving memory of Aileen (Penny) who passed away April 28, 1977, so sadly missed by all who knew her.

Sniper Kills Two

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (Reuter) — Police tried today to find a motive for a murderous rampage by a gunman who killed two persons and wounded 32 others when he fired automatic rifle shots into a crowd during the city's annual fiesta.

Police identified the gunman as 61-year-old Ira Attebury and said he may have been an out-patient at a nearby hospital.

An initial investigation indicates the gunman had received a medical discharge from the armed forces.

But police still have no firm idea why Attebury suddenly opened fire into the crowd during the day's festivities before he apparently killed himself as police closed in.

Two women were killed in the hail of bullets and two of the victims — one a two-year-old boy hit in the chest and shoulder — were reported in critical condition.

The man, shooting from a camper-van parked near the area where a parade was to begin, also wounded six police officers.

The shooting began as thousands of people were preparing to march in or watch the city's Battle of the Roses Parade during its annual pageant.

As the crowd scrambled for cover, police manoeuvred a bus across the line of fire and tried to evacuate dozens of onlookers who had been pinned down.

Breakthrough In Cancer?

CHICAGO (Reuter) — A Canadian-born neurologist disclosed Friday what could be a major breakthrough in the fight against cancer, saying he had achieved promising results with two new tests for early detection of the disease.

Dr. Samuel Bogoch from the Boston University School of Medicine said he was cautiously hopeful the two tests could be developed for general use in screening people for cancer.

Bogoch, associate research professor of biochemistry, delivered a paper on the two new tests at the annual conference of the American Academy of Neurology.

One is a blood test and the other a stain test which shows up cancer cells.

"We still have a long way to go. Studies are just in the preliminary stage," said Bogoch, a Saskatoon native who has been working on cancer research for 15 years. "Tests will have to be carried out on thousands more people before we can determine the full extent to which they can be utilized.

"But the results so far are potentially very exciting," he in an interview. "Early detection of cancer obviously means we have a better chance of saving the patient."

Just the Home For a Commuter

Contact British Railways.

The station at Roydon, 30 miles east of London, is up for rent.

Although the front hall — formerly the waiting room — might be a bit cavernous for most family's needs, it does offer the option of instant commuting for the head of the family. The tracks are a mere 10 feet away.

Being a sound sleeper helps. Some 133 trains roar past the station every day and the last train from London chugs by at 12:20 a.m. The first morning train whips through roughly one hour later.

But there's always the opportunity to meet lots of new people — the 3,000 who walk past the door every week on their way to buy tickets at the new station across the way.

A British Railways spokesman said no price has been set for the station pending applications for several government grants. But he said the 135-year-old building would require at least $40,000 worth of renovation.

Sithole Boycotts New Gov't

Times News Services

SALISBURY — Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole, who ran a poor second in Rhodesia's first majority rule election, announced today his party would not take up its parliamentary seats in the new coalition government.

He warned there could be "intensive killing" unless his claims of election irregularities are independently investigated.

"For the last 13 years, people have been killing each other. If we are not careful this may be the beginning of more intensive killing of one another and we would like to avoid that," he said in an interview.

But he went further than before in saying his party would boycott the "national unity" government now being formed and would not take up the 12 parliamentary seats it gained in the voting.

In contrast to the poor showing by Sithole's Zimbabwe African National Union, Muzorewa's United African National Council captured 51 of the 72 black parliamentary seats, ensuring the United Methodist Bishop would succeed Prime Minister Ian Smith and become Rhodesia's first black leader.

A smaller party led by Ndebele tribal chief Kayisa Ndiweni won nine seats. The other 28 seats in the 100-member Parliament are reserved for the white minority.

Although the government's election supervisory commission has already issued two interim reports calling the election free and fair, Sithole demanded an investigation by a team of "international jurists."

At the United Nations Friday, Third World members asked the Security Council to condemn last week's Rhodesian election as a sham, declare the outcome void and call on all countries to withhold recognition from the black-majority government it chose.

Gabon, Nigeria, Zambia, Bangladesh, Kuwait, Bolivia and Jamaica submitted a resolution in those terms at the council's first meeting in a debate requested by the 49-country UN African group. The council adjourned to Monday.

San Francisco Quake Jangles Only Nerves

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Just nine days after the 73rd anniversary of the city's disastrous 1906 tremor, a moderate earthquake swayed skyscrapers and jangled nerves in the San Francisco Bay area Friday, but caused no damage.

The shock forced an immediate shutdown of Bay Area Rapid Transit trains, including those shuttling early evening commuters through BART's five-mile-long underwater tube between San Francisco and Oakland.

BART operators restarted their cars, proceeding at a creeping pace, after it was determined the subway system's tracks were undamaged. Traffic lights near the ocean beach on the city's west side were knocked out, causing late-afternoon traffic headaches.

The University of California seismographic station said the quake was moderate and measured 4.2 on the open-ended Richter scale. The Geological Survey's earthquake information center at Golden, Colo., said the quake measured 3.8.

The epicenter was just off the San Francisco Peninsula coast and two to 10 miles under the water. The shaker lasted only a second and had no foreshocks or aftershocks.

Bomb Targets

PARIS (AP) — Terrorists early today hurled two firebombs at the door of an Israeli rest home with about 60 aged women residents, police said. The devices failed to explode.

An anonymous caller told the French news agency the attack against the Home for Israelis and Refugees is "a warning" from a previously unknown group he identified as the League of French Combatants Against Jewish Occupation.

ANDERSSON AT HASTINGS

By John Peters

Sweden's Ulf Andersson certainly deserved to win the traditional Hastings New Year's tournament in England. He was never in danger of losing a game. He is one of the world's best defenders. Here he rebuffs the attack of a former European Junior Champion, takes control of central squares, presses forward, and finishes with a mating attack.

Baby Held For Ransom

MERIDA, Mexico (AP) — Two men and a woman broke into the home of one of Yucatan state's richest families, kidnapped their baby daughter and are holding her for ransom.

A police spokesman said the kidnappers of 18-month-old Affife Greige Xacur left a note demanding between $200,000 and $1 million in ransom but had not communicated with the family since they abducted her Thursday morning.

Nicolas Antonio Greige, the father, is a Venezuelan citizen. The mother, Leonor Xacur, is heiress to a supermarket, drugstore and hotel fortune.

Before the Judge

The owners of the Kent Apartments at 1322 Blanshard were fined a total of $632 in Victoria provincial court Friday by Judge Fred Green.

Kenneth Sinclair and Paul Turner entered a guilty plea to a charge of non-compliance with a July 6, 1977 fire marshal's order which called for upgrading of fire alarm system, fire escape and other fire safety measures.

Crown counsel Richard Law said the period of non-compliance was between May 25 and Oct. 13 of last year, a total of 141 days. He said the owners didn't even put up paper stickers in the rooms advising occupants of emergency exits and routes until this week.

Law asked for an additional fine of up to $50 a day for the non-compliance period and pointed to a fine of $6,490 levied by Judge William Ostler against the New England Hotel last year.

Defence lawyer Michael Ellis told the court his clients spent about $50,000 to comply with the order and argued that the New England Hotel case was not comparable.

In denying Ellis' application for a discharge, Green said there seemed to be carelessness on the part of the owners and levied a $350 fine plus $2 a day for the 141 days.

Allan discharged 38-year-old Alfred Grant Cooley, of 6615 Feltin Road in Sooke, and 26-year-olds Gail Anne and John Alexander McLeod, both of 669 Constance, on a charge of conspiracy to traffic in heroin following a two-day preliminary hearing which ended Friday.

John Randall Golish, of 2312 Wark, was charged in connection with an incident Thursday night in which a Victoria city policeman on a motorcycle swerved to avoid being struck by a vehicle passing on the right. A chase ensued through the Mayfair shopping centre and on the wrong side of Blanshard before a vehicle was stopped and a man arrested.

Golish was released on $500 surety bail with the added provision he not drive while the case is before the courts. He was remanded until next Friday for election of his trial method.

A charge of criminal negligence causing death was read to 20-year-old Steven Fletcher Ellingson, of 1225 Clarke Road in Brentwood Bay. Ellingson was charged following a March 4 accident on the Pat Bay Highway near Elk Lake which resulted in the death of 33-year-old Cornelius Franciscus Everts.

Defence lawyer David Wilson elected trial by Supreme Court judge and jury and Sept. 27 and 28 were set aside for a preliminary hearing.

A 19-year-old man was fined $150 and barred from entering the Strathcona Hotel during his six-month probation period after pleading guilty to theft under $200.

"If it weren't for the suggestion you were well into your cups, you'd be facing a far more severe penalty," Green told Kevin John MacDonald, of 2425 Camelot.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan said staff members sitting at a table at the Old Forge cabaret about 1:30 a.m., March 10 saw MacDonald pick up some money from a table and asked him to put it back. After MacDonald refused, Victoria city police were called and, when MacDonald became abusive, he was placed in jail.

Green handed a 20-year-old a suspended sentence and 100 hours of community service work for stealing a 10-speed bicycle.

Richard Scott McKenzie, of 639 Constance, pleaded guilty to theft under $200 and Mulligan informed the court that police were called April 11 concerning a bicycle and a check of the registration number showed that it had been reported missing March 14 in Esquimalt.

"I had my bicycle stolen about six months ago and it's very annoying," Green commented before passing sentence.

"Working?" Green asked McKenzie.

"No," came the reply.

"Well, you're going to be," the judge stated.

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: Roy Arnold Starck, 42, of 4123 Interurban, $550; Lyle McCartney, 20, of 4120 Wilkinson, $475; Joseph Eugene Potvin, 23, of 919 Caledonia, $350; and William Samuel Joseph, 27, of the Songhees Indian Reserve, $300.

In addition, Joseph was ordered to perform 150 hours of community service work and take any alcoholic treatment and counselling as directed by his probation officer.

Hearing Monday On Centre

A rezoning application for a major shopping centre on the site of the Tillicum outdoor theatre will be considered by Saanich council at a public hearing Monday.

Cal Developments Ltd. wants to build a two-storey shopping centre of just under 300,000 square feet on the 30-acre property.

Plans include a department store and major food store. The developers estimate Saanich would derive $250,000 to $350,000 in tax revenue from the project.

The hearing in the council chamber starts at 7.30 p.m. Monday.

Ont. Nuclear Plant Unsafe?

8 U.S. Nuclear Plants Ordered to Shut Down

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) has ordered eight nuclear power plants shut down until they make safety improvements needed to prevent a repetition of the Three Mile Island accident.

The NRC also said Friday it would continue to study these plants and might require additional safety changes later.

All eight plants plus the heavily-damaged Three Mile Island Unit 2 in Pennsylvania were designed by Babcock and Wilcox Co. using systems which, NRC officials said, made the facilities sensitive to malfunctions and hard to control.

With the crippling of Three Mile Island Unit 2 and the closing of its eight sister plants, 14 U.S. plants have been shut down by NRC safety orders, or one out of every five nuclear power plants in the country.

Five other plants have been shut down since March 13 for inspections to make sure they can withstand earthquakes without serious damage to their cooling systems.

The only plant in western United States affected by Friday's shut-down order is the BW-designed Rancho Seco plant in California which opened in 1974. The NRC ordered it to shut down starting today until its safety improvements are completed.

Also ordered to shut down today was one of the three Oconee units, which were opened in 1973 and 1974 at Lake Keowee, S.C.

Leaked Report Gives Details

TORONTO (CP) — Leaked documents made public Friday indicate that Ontario's Bruce generating station has been plagued with some of the same problems that last month triggered the worst nuclear power accident in United States history.

"The events outlined are only the tip of the iceberg. Suffice it to say that something must be done," an anonymous correspondent identifying himself only as "Schultz" wrote in a letter to Eddie Sargent, Liberal member of the Ontario legislature for Grey-Bruce.

Seven reports on problems at Bruce nuclear station on Lake Huron and the covering letter from Schultz were given to the Ontario legislature's select committee on Ontario Hydro affairs by Stuart Smith, leader of the Liberal opposition.

Since the accident that led to the closing of the two Three Mile Island nuclear plants near Harrisburg, Pa., in March, Ontario Hydro and energy ministry officials have vigorously defended the Canada's Candu reactors, saying Ontario nuclear plants are much safer than those in the U.S.

But Schulz said many areas of operation require further investigation, including the Bruce stack monitoring system, which he said has never operated.

The system is supposed to warn of the release of radioactive gases, but releases could occur without the operator ever knowing, the letter said.

"The release would eventually be discovered (perhaps one week later) by a chemical sampling, but the operator is defenceless in taking immediate action because of poorly-designed equipment."

Schulz said a nuclear safety review should be carried out by knowledgeable people "with no pecuniary interests in nuclear power."

He said leaked radioactive substances inside the containment building at Bruce could be safely eliminated by Candu's unique vacuum system.

But if there were a hole in the containment system — and there have been at least six at Bruce — the vacuum unit would be useless and the radioactive release would be worse than at Three Mile Island, he said.

The most serious of the seven incidents described in the reports was a deuterium gas explosion which occurred in an inactive reactor on March 14, 1978.

Deuterium is heavy hydrogen and has the same explosive qualities as ordinary hydrogen.

An Ontario Hydro report said a spark from the torch of a welder who was repairing a tube cap on a line leading to a gas tank caused the deuterium gas explosion.

Gas had been taken out of the area where the welder was working March 6, but no checks had been made on gas levels, the report said.

The documents noted that following the explosion, pressure-release devices operated as designed and minor amounts of radioac-

It's a Case Of Legal Precedent

VANCOUVER (UPC) — Lawyers using the provincial courthouse library have been told they cannot use the reference room any more because too many books are missing.

A notice went up on the library door Friday, causing embarrassment to the lawyers and widespread amusement among prisoners and others waiting for court appearances.

The notice, signed by senior prosecutor Bruce Donald, said it was "regretfully necessary" to close the Crown counsel library to lawyers and articled students because of the high number of missing books.

"We don't know exactly how many books are missing, but enough have vanished to make it a real problem," a library spokesman said. "We don't know if they have been stolen or just not returned."

2 Tankers Collide, One Sinks

BREST, France (AP) — A tanker carrying more than 12 million gallons of crude oil sank off the Brittany coast today after colliding with another tanker in the area where the supertanker Amoco Cadiz was wrecked last year.

The ship's hull was gashed and an oil slick was reported, but French officials said a strong wind was pushing it away from land. They said they were not expecting the "black tide" that came from the Amoco Cadiz after it ran aground last May 16 and dumped its 67 million gallons of crude.

The sinking of the 28,695-ton, Liberian-registered tanker Gino appeared certain to hamper efforts to prevent its load of crude from pouring out of its gashed hull into the sea.

All 33 members of its crew were safely rescued by the Soviet ship Veliky Oktiabr, Brest maritime officials said in a communique.

The other ship, the 18,000-ton, Norwegian-registered tanker Team Coaster, carried no cargo but 29,000 gallons of its fuel spilled into the Atlantic. It also suffered damage to its bow but was still able to navigate. There were no reports of injuries to its crew.

An oil slick estimated two kilometres miles long and 180 metres wide surfaced 200 km off the French coast immediately after the collision, officials said.

Maritime officials said the slick was far enough off the coast not to present an immediate danger to the waters and beaches of Brittany.

The sea was reported calm but fog was hampering efforts to determine the full extent of the oil spill, port officials said.

"We are preparing for any eventuality but we hope we will not have to use our full contigency plan," said Environmental Minister Michel d'Ornano.

WASHINGTON (WP) — The U.S. Transportation Department Friday asked the Ford Motor Co. to recall nearly 1 million 1970-73 Ford Mavericks and 1971-73 Mercury Comets to correct a "safety-related defect" that causes a large percentage of the cars to catch fire after rear-end collisions.

Citing new data that indicate the Mavericks and Comets may be more prone to rear-end collision fires than even the Ford Pinto, DOT's National Highway Traffic Safety Administration wrote Ford president Philip Caldwell Friday to warn of the findings.

The letter to Caldwell cites DOT's "initial determination" of a safety defect, and invites Ford to respond at a public meeting May 29. Unless Ford can prove NHTSA"s studies to be incorrect, such a defect finding carries with it a requirement to recall.

NHTSA said it has received reports of at least 26 rear-impact crashes involving Mavericks and Comets resulting in fuel spillage and fire, and causing at least 31 fatalities and 19 injuries.

NHTSA said it had conducted an engineering analysis of the problem, and found that in two of five test crashes fires started because of fuel leakage.

Mother Smothers Baby To Avoid Arab Terrorists

JERUSALEM (AP) — An Israeli mother Friday described how she smothered her baby girl to stop her cries as Arab terrorists killed her husband and other daughter.

Israel television showed the interview with Semadar Haran, who five days earlier survived 90 minutes of horror by hiding with her two-year-old daughter, Yael, while the raiders seized her husband, Dani, and five-year-old Eynat.

Mrs. Haran, dry-eyed but speaking in bursts of emotion, said her entire family fled to the utility room of their apartment with a neighbor, Germane Sasson, when they knew the raiders were nearby.

The baby could not be calmed, she said, and the father and Eynat left to get a pacifier.

"Suddenly there was shooting that shook the building to its foundations. Yael screamed," Mrs. Haran said. She said she could hear the terrorists looking for the source of the cries. Mrs. Haran continued:

"I grabbed Yael and covered her mouth. I knew as soon as they discovered us they would throw a grenade inside.

"I had the feeling that she could die from this. But I made a quick calculation. I said: 'She is going to die anyway if they throw a grenade. We will all die, and so will she. There is a chance I can keep her quiet — maybe she will lose consciousness.'

"I held my hand on her mouth until I had no strength left. I felt she wanted to breath, but I had no choice. I had to keep her quiet because the footsteps below — they were walking, searching."

She could feel the life draining from her daughter, yet she held on. "At that moment, I felt as if I were going through the holocaust. I am hiding upstairs with the child in my arms — in fact strangling her — and another woman. We are all alone. There is no one to care for us."

"I turned to Germane and said: 'I think now I am left alone.' I knew that with these murderous terrorists there is no chance Dani and Eynat will return."

She said that during the ordeal she thought of the Nazi holocaust which her mother survived. "I didn't see any difference between then, when people were led like sheep to the slaughter, and that day when I felt I was going to my own slaughter."

Four terrorists entered the building Sunday after wading ashore from a raft. Two raiders were killed and the other two captured.

Hydro 'Meddling' in Study

REVELSTOKE (CP) — The man hired to study the social and economic impact of B.C. Hydro's Revelstoke dam project has resigned after charging that Hydro interfered with the program.

Nick Vincent, who was hired in 1977 as impact monitor for the $1.5-billion project, says Hydro now has taken control of the program which was originally designed to be totally independent of the Crown corporation.

"In the end there was no way that the program was serving the public as it was supposed to," he said in an interview earlier this week. "I could not go to the public any more and say that what I was telling them was lily white."

Vincent said project manager Ralph Spinney was the person who interfered most with his efforts to remain independent.

Spinney, however, said Thursday he did not intend to be obstructive but felt Vincent's reports contained "too many words and not enough information."

He said he wanted statistics in the reports while Vincent wanted to make qualitative judgments.

"I made sure before I took the job that Hydro could not interfere with me, that I was independent. I quit when the program was emasculated, when the rug was pulled out from underneath the credibility."

Vincent said one of his main problems was Spinney, who believed that the dam near this southeastern B.C. city "should be built without any interference from anyone and he made it clear in a hundred different ways."

He said Spinney viewed the program as a "potential hindrance" which should stick to statistics and not make qualitative judgments about the impact of the dam on area residents.

Vincent charged that:

—His reports were delayed, some as long as three months, or obscured before being made public;

—Hydro personnel obtained copies of the reports before they were presented to the regional board, contrary to the original agreement.

—He was told not to attend future meetings of a technical committee.

He said that in March a special committee of regional district and Hydro representatives was set up to review Vincent's reports.

"It meant that my reports would go to Hydro in the draft stage before they went to the regional board," he said. "It was the last straw and I quit."

What do you do when those with the cash to hand out all agree you're doing a splendid job — but don't want to pay anything to help you do it better?

That's the dilemma being faced by the people at the Victoria READ Society.

It was more than two years ago that I first wrote of the problems of the READ Society and, while some things have changed, the problems haven't. The teachers dedicated to helping both adults and children with learning disabilities were short of funds then and they're short of funds now.

What has changed is the special school's location and size. It has grown from 40 to more than 60 students ranging in age from six to the middle 40s and now has three full-time, one half-time and two part-time teachers and a secretary plus the co-ordinator and diagnostician, Mario Strauss, who took over last August.

From cramped quarters in an old church building, then to rented premises near Beacon Hill Park, the society moved last fall to a large house it bought on Linden Street.

"We scraped up enough for a down payment," Strauss, who was born in Chile and worked in the public school system in the B.C. Interior, explained. "But now we have huge mortgage payments of more than $800 a month."

To meet that amount, pay for heat, light and water, give a small salary increase long overdue to the teachers, and help some of the poorer families with the fees, Strauss reckons they'd need a grant of around $20,000.

In today's terms, that doesn't seem very much but READ, which stands for Reading, Evaluation and Development, hasn't yet been able to get anyone to pay it. And boy, they've tried!

Things got so bad back in December, in fact, the teachers held a meeting with parents of students and talked about closing the school down.

"Then we got a couple of grants from the Vancouver Foundation and the Bronfman Foundation as well as an assessment grant from the Victoria School Board," Strauss explains. "So we managed to struggle along and keep going. But they were only temporary things."

From its inception in June, 1976, the READ Society has struggled for recognition and assistance from both the Education Department and the Department of Health. Officials got the recognition okay, but no cash.

"Health authorities and those at Human Resources say it's an education matter and the Education Department says it can only give help through a school board," Strauss says in a frustrated tone. "They all say we're doing a wonderful job — but still we haven't had much luck in getting funds."

Strauss has applied three times for assistance from provincial lottery funds but so far hasn't heard back.

The Society has been able to get a Canada Works grant to stage a summer school starting July 3 at both the Linden Street school and their new branch in Sidney. Made up of two 18-day sessions, the intensive learning program will benefit both the students and the young student teachers the society will employ during the summer.

That's fine for the summer but it's the rest of the year that the READ Society people worry about. For three hourly lessons a week, a student pays $100 a month. Though that may not be overly expensive in terms of things like piano lessons and getting your car fixed, there are still many who need the school and just can't afford it.

There are those who can afford it, of course, like one adult student who owns his own contracting business.

"When you meet him he is perfectly charming and appears competent," Strauss says. "But he is totally illiterate. He sees words as pictures and has spent all his life guessing them. When we tested him, he couldn't spell and or sell and wasn't able to read words like jet, dim, mix or God."

For that man, help is on the way. But it's all those who maybe can't afford the extra tuition they need that the READ Society wants to reach. And it wants the financial help to be able to do it.

Mario Strauss looks concerned.

"You know, we're in the business of teaching the basics of how to read and write," he says. "That's our main job and we can tell a student exactly how much progress is made every three months.

"But just as important as this academic progress, is the fact that children or adults see the improvement in themselves as people and they begin to see themselves as learners rather than failures."

Youth Parties Rock Saanich

Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier said today police patrols at liquor outlets may have to be stepped up to combat an alarming increase in rowdy beach and house parties in the municipality.

His comment came after Saanich police reported receiving a record 72 complaints concerning noisy youths and youths drinking in a 12-hour period overnight. There were 30 similar complaints in the Colwood area and six in the city over the same period.

The number of complaints was by far the highest of the year for the Saanich force.

Yet a senior police official warned this morning that the worst is still to come as the fine weather continues and summer approaches.

Couvelier, chairman of the police board, said he is concerned about the incidence of rowdyism and drunkenness among youth but felt the emphasis should be placed on the source of the problem — the liquor store outlets.

"It looks like we are going to have to step up the liquor store end of enforcement and following up with each liquor store personnel," he said. "Juveniles should not be getting this stuff."

A Saanich police spokesman said officers feel hamstrung in dealing with the problem since the police board has cut overtime from its budget which would have allowed the establishment of a beach patrol.

Couvelier said the policemen's complaints about the lack of overtime were "self-serving."

"Were the board to be satisfied the department is doing everything it could to minimize the problems then the request for additional financial support would probably be considered," he said.

Couvelier said overtime was cut because of the tremendous cost factor. Last year the Saanich force's overtime ratio was among the highest in the province.

In 1977 the board allocated $22,000 for beach patrols. The figure was increased to $30,000 last year but because of the beer strike less than a third was used. This year the board dropped the item completely from its budget.

Couvelier said police alone cannot hope to tackle the problem. It is a community responsibility.

In addition, he said, judges and prosecutors have to be made more aware of the concern and start taking a no-nonsense approach.

Around the Ridings

It's a Gracious Battle for Victoria

By AL FORREST

The respect the candidates have for each other in two-seat Victoria riding amounts almost to fear — and yet, being Victorians, they are very gentlemanly about it.

"Charles Barber is a tremendous organizer," one Socred campaign worker laments, "but how can you attack him when he spends most of his time helping little old ladies across the street?"

The NDP in turn is having a tough time drawing a bead on Socreds Sam Bawlf and Mike Young.

This gracious approach spills over into the hustings where wealthy Rockland executives shake hands with NDP campaigners and wish them well.

Meanwhile, Socred Mike Young, knocking on doors in NDP country, has to turn down repeated invitations to come in for a spot of tea.

The Victoria campaign got about as angry as it's likely to get when Bawlf spluttered from a public platform that Barber is "not a fair-minded MLA."

Hanson replies: "If that's meant as criticism, I'm certainly not going to attack it."

Both major parties are wading through their complex election platforms but the voters appear to have already simplified the issues.

Says Gus Papaloukas of Central Barber Shop, 706 Broughton:

"Some customers say if the NDP gets in again it will take 15 years to pay all the debts.

"Others say the Socreds are ruthless — they have no heart. That seems to be the main issue.

"I think the NDP voters think you run a government like a Greek tavern — everyone comes in and helps himself to whatever he wants."

There are 61,200 registered voters in the riding, up about 9,000 from 52,226 in 1975.

Redistribution has added part of Victoria West and a bit of southern Saanich but extracted a section of the Gorge, which goes into Esquimalt-Port Renfrew.

Campaign organizers say the Gorge loss balances off about equally with the Saanich gain. The new element is Victoria West, a small but devotedly NDP area.

"This will help us," says Barber campaign chairman Diane Kennedy, "but possibly only a small amount. Those are our people but the turnout from Vic West is traditionally low. If we can get enough of them out, it might make a difference."

The riding has seven major areas.

James Bay: A mix of single family homes (in the west) and apartments near Beacon Hill Park. This is the centre of childless families: singles, young marrieds and retireds.

The elderly settle here because of the proximity of the park and the downtown core.

Fairfield: This area to the east of Beacon Hill Park is the most mobile in the region. Apartments, rooming houses and rented single family homes are predominant.

More than half the people in the general Fairfield area were not there when the last election was called three years ago, making predictions hazardous.

Waterfront and Rockland: The belt on Dallas Road, along the Oak Bay border and back along Rockland Avenue is the heart of Social Credit support in the riding. The running joke is that if there are any NDP voters here, they are servants. It is only a slight exaggeration.

East Fernwood: This area north of Victoria High school to Hillside is made up almost exclusively of single family homes. The NDP had a slight edge here in the last election. West Fernwood has a growing concentration of apartments along Cook Street.

Victoria West: This is a new addition to the riding. More than 50 per cent are for the NDP but voter turnout is low.

North of Hillside: This is a bewildering area for all parties. There are large pockets of ethnic groups, especially East Indians. They are friendly to politicians but not too interested in what they have to say. Many residents in this area say they are undecided and the voter turnout is fairly low.

Southern Saanich: This is also a new section for the riding. This was Social Credit country in the last provincial election, although the NDP did better here than in most parts of Saanich.

The crucial factor: More than 30 per cent of the voters in the riding are 60 or older.

The retired people who have recently arrived from Saskatchewan tend to vote NDP while those from Alberta tend towards Social Credit.

But there are thousands of others.

Most of them were born and raised into the Liberal or Conservative party and now must decide provincially (in most cases) between the Socreds and the NDP.

These are the vote splitters. They can cheerfully cast one vote for socialism and another one for free enterprise.

Vote splitting has been the norm in Victoria in the 1970s.

Again in 1975 the vote was split. This time it was Socred Sam Bawlf leading the poll followed by Barber, the first NDPer ever elected in the riding.

What will happen this time?

"Everybody knows Charlie Barber. If anyone has a problem, they go to see Charlie. I don't know anything about this other NDP fellow — what's his name? — Hanson?

"I like the NDP but Social Credit has some good candidates running, too — Bawlf and the mayor (Young). They're all good candidates and it's a difficult choice."

John Horam, 80, is another Barber fan — but he's not going to vote for him.

"I've always supported the Progressive Conservative Party, especially in the federal field. Bawlf and Young are both very good candidates for this riding. I couldn't vote for Barber because I can't support the NDP."

The last-minute entry of two Conservative candidates and the Western Indepedence Party has confused things a bit but few voters give them much of a chance. They see it as a choice between the two major provincial parties.

The candidates, in the order they will appear on the ballot:

Sam Bawlf, Social Credit: A successful 34—year—old developer, possibly a millionaire, who has a reputation for getting things done. His performance at the helm of the B.C. Ferries fleet was summed up by Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce director Jack McKernan: "Somebody else might have done as well but nobody could have done better!"

Bawlf also has a reputation as a poll—topper, coming first in the city aldermanic race in 1974 and outpolling Barber in the 1975 provincial election.

Mike Young, Social Credit: Another poll—topper, Young is running very close to Bawlf in the early going. They can't both come first this time and, if another party split is in the works, it could be the most interesting race of the night to see if the Socred winner is Young or Bawlf. Young ran for alderman in 1971, topping the poll in his first try. He did it again in 1973, which encouraged him to run (successfully) for mayor in 1975. He was re—elected mayor in 1977 by acclamation.

Charles Barber, NDP: Praised by the man—on—the street, mainly older citizens, he is feared by Social Credit campaigners as one of the best NDP organizers in the province. Barber began to achieve fame with Cool—Aid, which among other things arranged for young people to help older Victorians by driving them to meetings or on shopping trips.

His constituency office on Blanshard is operating on a year—around basis and many Social Credit supporters have thanked him for his personal help. It is this kind of approach that helped Barber to get in on a split vote last time.

Gordon Hanson, NDP: The unknown candidate as far as most voters are concerned, Hanson was staff representative for the B.C. Government Employees Union until he resigned to contest the election. He has been active on a low-profile basis in community groups and within the party.

He has led the attack on Young for not resigning as mayor, saying anyone running for office should be prepared to make it a full-time job.

This has been the only purely local issue to make any impact in Victoria.

W. Jack Lindsay, Progressive Conservative: Manager of the Real Estate and Insurance Credit Union, he comes from a dedicated Tory family and has hopes of reviving the party as a free enterprise alternative.

Margaret (Maggi) Lynn, Progressive—Conservative: An outspoken veteran radio and TV broadcaster working in Victoria on a freelance basis. She is a noted advocate of causes which, while not lost, may be considered longshots.

Michael Easton, Western Independence Party: A former disc jockey, he is unemployed at the moment but is acting as publicity agent for his party. His platform is basically federal, arguing that B.C. needs a better deal from Ottawa.

At NDP and Social Credit campaign headquarters, there are more frowns than smiles. Both sides are nervous, almost fearful, about the possible result.

Both sides expect Barber to outpoll Hanson but that could lead to almost anything — both NDP candidates winning or both losing — with all sorts of combinations in between.

Social Credit canvassing was just getting under way at time of writing and it was not known whether Bawlf was running ahead of Young. The assumption going in was that they would be very close, with a slight edge to Bawlf, because of his reputation as a man who has achieved many things for the city.

NDP organizers say their plan comes down to this: Barber will win. The task is to get Hanson elected.

Socreds are trying to get both their people elected but the depth of their concern is evident everywhere. Every other sentence at Social Credit party headquarters contains the name "Barber."

Looking at things from a distance, Victoria Ald. Bill Tindall said he would not be surprised to see Bawlf and Barber re-elected once more on a split vote.

As manager of the Better Business Bureau, he has his own free enterprise preferances, and has served with both Young and Bawlf on council, but he also admires the work of Barber at the grass roots level and rates him a powerful campaigner.

From the other side, Ald. Larry Ryan also sees the possibility of a split vote.

"As secretary of the Victoria Labor Council, I am hardly a neutral observer. I am supporting all NDP candidates in this area. But, my goodness, a cabinet minister and a popular mayor (running for Social Credit). That is a very formidable team."

On the other hand, he said, Barber's organizational abilities and his record as a worker should get him back in.

"It promises to be a very interesting election."
